Marshall Sees Danger in Delaying Arms Aid

Area Defense Plans Under Pact in Final Preparation Stage, He Tells Congress

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

Gen. George C. Marshall yesterday declared it would be "very dangerous" to delay arms aid to North Atlantic Treaty members, and said area defense plans are in a final stage of preparation.

Failure to act on the Administration's $1,450,000,000-plus program to help rearm non-Communist nations, said the former Secretary of State, will mean "a very serious prolongation of a very dangerous weakness."

When members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee pressed him for an answer to their key question—is the outlay for piecemeal spending, or is there a detailed defense plan—the soldier-statesman replied:

"Maybe I should not have mentioned it, but as far as I know the strategic concept has already been determined and I understand the formal conclusion of the plan will be reached presently."

Main Concepts Settled

He said at another point that the "main concepts" of this strategy "have all been settled already."

"I thought you already had it," said the World War II chief of staff, apparently referring to testimony given the committee in executive session Friday by the Joint Chiefs of Staff before they left here for Europe.

"We didn't get what you say is there to be gotten," put in Representative Walter H. Judd (R., Minn.). After the session with the joint chiefs, several committee members had said they heard no concrete planning information.

General Marshall said that

Dying of Polio, Pilot Charts Disease's Course for Doctors

Lieut. (jg.) and Mrs. Olin Chiles with daughter

By Robert P. Jordan
Post Reporter

A young Navy pilot's notes on the progress of bulbar poliomyelitis which soon killed him were released here yesterday by his widow.

Undertaken in the hope of aiding attending doctors, Lieut. (jg.) James Olin Chiles, 25, of 219 Aubrey lane, Oxon Hill, Md., told his dramatic story in a shaky scrawl and sentences made brief by pain and anxiety.

The final note was written about 12 hours before his death last Thursday morning at Bethesda Naval Hospital.

Lieutenant Chiles was taken there about 1 p. m. a week ago today, after reporting to Anacostia Naval Air Station dispensary because, Mrs. Chiles said, he felt "tired." He merely went for a check up, she said, but found he had symptoms of polio.

When Mrs. Chiles, 26, visited him Wednesday noon, he was still able to talk, she said. He told her, "Dorothy, this is the best thing that could happen. Maybe I can work with the doctors and find a cure for this thing."

A few hours later came his first note, written in pencil in a fairly steady hand in his personal notebook:

"To Doctor

"First noticed vision incoherent or something at 1640 (4:40 p. m.) can't even see clearly what I'm writing.

"If anybody puts me in a respirator, please note: I cannot swallow. I have a rapid accumulation of mucus in my throat. If I am not allowed to turn my head to the side to spit I'll choke to death."

His next brief jotting came less than an hour later:

"Doctor

"1733 (5:33 p. m.) Noted very poor control of tongue in mouth."

By this time unable to speak, his vision growing worse, Mrs. Chiles asked him how it was going.

"My guess," he wrote, in a scrawl that rambled all over the notebook, "is that I'm going to be all right."

She then asked him if he was feeling any pain.

"Some but not bad."

"Every person on this floor has a con—— (word unreadable) contagious disease—don't want you around.

"Can't read—vision's shot temporarily.

"Only thing I'm worried about is you.

"Help me get pillow under head.

"You should not stay. This will be my worst night. Tomorrow we should know."

Mrs. Chiles asked if she could get him anything, or help him. He wrote:

"Doctor prescribes what I need."

And then followed the last jotting:

"My neck is paralyzed, doesn't

Voters Say Which of 4 In Virginia

Today's Balloting Decides Bitterest Contest in Recent Years for Governor

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

Richmond, Aug. 1.—Virginia's most spirited gubernatorial campaign in recent years passed through its mopping-up phase today with a barrage of last-minute appeals for votes by all candidates.

Some time Tuesday night the voters probably will know the outcome of a heated four-way contest, in which about 300,000 ballots are expected to be cast.

They will know whether the "Byrd organization" can survive a three-way split of votes in the most challenging test of strength during its 25 years of existence.

From among the four Democratic candidates most likely will emerge the next Governor of Virginia, since nomination in the Democratic primary usually is tantamount to election.

The Four Candidates

The primary candidates are: Remmie L. Arnold, Petersburg pen manufacturer; John S. Battle of Charlottesville, a State Senator, and candidate of the State Democratic "organization"; Francis Pickins Miller of Albemarle County, the "anti-organization" aspirant, and Horace H. Edwards, former Mayor of Richmond, who has campaigned in "the middle of the road."

Walter Johnson, of Heathville, is the lone GOP candidate in the State's first Republican primary, to be held concurrently with that of the Democratic Party.

Hours for Balloting

Polls in the 1768 precincts in the State's 100 counties will be open from 6:30 a. m. until 7:30 p. m. In Alexandria, Fairfax and Arlington counties, the hours are on daylight saving time; in the remainder of the State they are on Eastern standard time.

Battle, who has aimed most of his campaign oratory at Miller, tonight jabbed at Edwards' sales tax proposal, and made slight reference to the other candidates.

The former Mayor of Richmond has "ignored the present prosperous condition of the State treasury," Battle said. "He has suggested no measures of economy, but in keeping with his past public record, has gone overboard in favor of more taxes."

Edwards, meanwhile, said tonight he is in the "middle of the road man" who can help to quiet all the campaign quarrels.

In his radio address he promised that if he wins the election he will invite the counsel of two of his opponents, John S. Battle and Francis Pickens Miller, "and all their supporters."

Edwards also got in a plug for the sales tax, which has been the major plank in his campaign platform.

Speaking for Battle over a Statewide hookup were State Senator Andrew W. Clark of Alexandria; Vivian Page of Norfolk, former State Senator; Scott Irby of Blackstone, former president of the Virginia Banking Association; Sidney S. Kellam, Battle's campaign manager and treasurer of Princess Anne County; Bernard Coleman

Bridges Gets $35,000 Pay As Trustee

UMW Welfare Fund Gives Same Salary To Senator and Coal Operators' Man

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Senator Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) is receiving $35,000 a year salary as trustee of the United Mine Workers Welfare Fund administering the pension plan he himself proposed more than a year ago, Congress was told yesterday.

Miss Josephine Roche, UMW's director of the fund, testified before a Senate Banking subcommittee that two of the three trustees of the fund have accepted a $35,000-a-year salary, but that John L. Lewis is not one of those two. Lewis, Bridges and Ezra Van Horn, coal operators' representative, are the three trustees. Lewis is chairman of the three-man board.

Bridges, who also receives a $12,500 salary and a tax-free $2500 expense account as a Senator, is the public member of the welfare fund board.

Reports have been current on Capitol Hill for some months that Bridges was receiving such a salary from the UMW pension fund, but inquiries about it have met with either silence or denial.

Bridges Out of Town

Bridges was in New Hampshire yesterday and could not be reached for comment on the testimony that he was accepting the $35,000 salary.

Other Senators refused to comment on the testimony.

Bridges' interest in the miners' welfare plan goes back to the nationwide coal strike in the Spring of 1948. Just a few hours before Lewis was slated to answer contempt of court charges before Federal Justice T. Alan Goldsborough on April 12, 1948, for failure to obey a back-to-work order, he called off the coal strike.

At the time Lewis announced he had agreed to a pension plan proposed by Bridges, then newly-appointed third trustee of the miners' welfare and retirement fund. The settlement was reached at an early morning conference of Bridges, Van Horn and Lewis. Van Horn dissented but a two-thirds vote carried the trustee board.

Probing Monopolies

The Senate Banking subcommittee, headed by Senator A. Willis Robertson (D., Va.), is looking into alleged "monopolistic" tendencies in the coal industry and the mine-workers union.

The subcommittee has directed this part of its inquiry into the UMW pension fund, which started on a 5-cent-a-ton contribution and now takes 20 cents. The money is put up entirely by coal companies.

The disclosure concerning the salaries of the two trustees, Bridges and Van Horn, came out under questioning by Senator John Sparkman (D., Ala.). Miss Roche said the job as trustee for the welfare fund includes a $35,000-a-year salary "for those who accept it."

She paused a minute and then added that two trustees have accepted, "of whom Mr. Lewis is not one."

Management Announced

McCormick Niece, 28, to Head Newly-Bought Times-Herald

By Robert Thompson
Post Reporter

A 28-year-old niece of Col. Robert R. McCormick of the Chicago Tribune, mother of two children and in charge of a small Illinois daily, will head the Washington Times-Herald under Colonel McCormick's ownership.

She is Mrs. Ruth Elizabeth McCormick Miller, president of the LaSalle (Ill.) News-Tribune.

Colonel McCormick announced the appointment in New York yesterday, along with the names of others who will be active in the management of the paper here. He bought the property on July 20 from seven executives of the Times-Herald, who inherited it from Colonel McCormick's cousin, the late Eleanor Medill (Cissie) Patterson.

Colonel McCormick said Mrs. Miller will be vice president of the Times-Herald. Others who will step into the management include Mrs. Miller's husband, Maxwell Peter Miller, jr., 30, as secretary or treasurer; Colonel McCormick as president; and Francis M. Flynn, president and general manager of

Bill to Curb 5 Per Centers Prepared By Mundt

Legislation Would Provide Penalty For Procurement Contract 'Leaks'

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Senate investigators yesterday expressed great interest in a "mystery" Texas bank account held in the name of John Maragon, a key figure in the "five per center" probe.

Maragon himself told reporters the committee may have subpenaed the San Antonio account, and Senator Karl E. Mundt (R., S. D.) said he considered this the "main issue now."

Mundt also disclosed that he has prepared legislation to regulate the activities of "five per centers" and make it a crime for Government officials or employes to "leak" procurement plans to them.

To Confer With Ferguson

He said he planned to introduce the bill today or Wednesday after conferring with Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.), who has legislation in preparation along the same lines.

Maragon, according to committee sources, previously had testified that he has only two bank accounts, both here.

Maragon talked guardedly of the Texas account at a press conference yesterday. He called in reporters to deny flatly many of the reports which have been published about him and make a few charges of his own.

He urged an investigation of Henry F. Grady, American Ambassador to Greece, and former Democratic National Treasurer George Killion. The Senate committee, said Maragon, should look into their part in the 1947 organization of the Dollar Steamship Lines—now the President Lines.

The smiling, Malta-born "man about Washington" at first refused to answer a reporter's question of whether or not he had maintained a $40,000 account in a San Antonio bank. Then he said he'd had an account three years ago but wouldn't state the amount.

Maragon added that the question of his bank accounts is not how much may have been on deposit but how much of the money was his.

How Much Is Yours

"You may have a $500,000 bank account and the question is how much of the money is yours," he said. "You can be in business and make transactions and the deposit ledger will show big amounts, but the question is how much of it is yours."

Senator Mundt said the committee wants full data on this account and added that he supposed the Internal Revenue Bureau will also.

The South Dakota Senator said he believed this is the major thread to follow as far as Maragon was concerned. Data on his dealings in surplus Government war property largely has been volunteered by the witness, he indicated.

Better Atom Weapons in Production

AEC Tells Congress Of Vast Supply of Low-Grade Material

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The Atomic Energy Commission came up with a highly optimistic six-months report to Congress yesterday.

It reported that "new and more effective atomic weapons" are being produced on an industrial basis. It stated that in the "last six months, there has been marked advance in several phases of the production program, which provides the uranium 235 and plutonium essential for atomic weapons and nuclear reactors."

Comprehensive prospecting in this country has revealed "enormous tonnages of very low-grade materials," it said, and added:

"They cost more to process, but they could be utilized in the future to sustain an atomic energy program for military purposes should lower-cost uranium cease to be available."

However, the report also points out that actions have been taken to improve and make more certain the supply of uranium ores from abroad.

A large portion of the commission's report was devoted to developments of the use of radioactive materials on the medical front. Recent experiments indicate, it states, that the relatively inexpensive radioactive cobalt may eventually prove better for treatment of cancer than radium.

"Increasing attention was devoted to reactor development," the report states in its opening paragraph," an item of prime mil-

Senate Faces Another Bout On Foreign Aid

Proposed Limitations In Bill Expected to Renew Wrangle Today

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The $5,647,724,000 foreign aid bill, sidetracked last week in a Senate parliamentary tangle, faces another rough bout with Senate rules today.

Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) challenged proposed changes in the bill by the Senate Appropriations Committee, and threatened points of order against them.

A round of points of order last week touched off the rules wrangle that landed the bill back in the Appropriations Committee.

Lucas said his points of order will be aimed at the same three "legislative" amendments he challenged last week, on the ground that legislation has no place in a money bill.

The Senate committee rephrased the amendments in an attempt to at least technically comply with the rules. Instead of new legislation, they became limitations on spending.

"The objective of the amendments hasn't changed one bit," Lucas told newsmen. "Although negatively phrased, they still do the same thing indirectly. If the Appropriations Committee can do this, it can legislate as much as it wants to."

The three contested amendments:

Kissing Wife At Md. Beach Leads to Fine

It may have been just a husbandly kiss on the beach, but the judge said $10 fine and $2.50 court costs.

Roy Miffleton, 31, of 5102 South Dakota ave. ne., found this out last night when he was fined in Galesville, Md., police court for disorderly conduct—all because of a little incident which began with a playful kiss on his wife's cheek Sunday at Mayo Beach.

Also given a $10 fine by Trial Magistrate Norman Hazard was John D. Cain, 28, of 2845 28th st. se., an 11th Precinct policeman, who was accused of taking part in a post-kiss disturbance at the beach.

Waters Lee, refreshment attendant at the beach, testified he warned Miffleton that such kissing in public wasn't allowed. From there on, the testimony varied.

Lee, Charles Trabing, beach proprietor, his wife and two special policemen, Charles J. Trabing, son of the proprietor, and Howell Brashears, said one thing. The gist of it was that Miffleton became loud, defiant and profane.

Just as many others said that wasn't true at all. Miffleton, Cain, and four other members of their party denied any disturbance, profanity, defiance or unseemly conduct.

What's more, Cain said he thought he was being taken along as a witness and wasn't advised of his actual arrest until 15 minutes later. The special officers said

Shotgun Blast Kills Woman; Police Holding Her Husband

Ironworker Shot To Death in His Basement Flat

A. Vance Bowling, 45, 1838 3d st. ne., an ironworker, was shot and killed in his basement apartment last night. Police are holding another ironworker who, they said, belongs to the same union that Bowling did.

The man held is Clarence Reynolds, 44, 2804 Myrtle ave. ne. He was arrested at the scene.

Twelfth Precinct Police Pvt. Arnold F. Jackson said Reynolds had been business agent until about a week ago of Iron Workers Local No. 5, which has offices at 405 9th st. nw. He said he had been informed Bowling had voted against him in a union election.

Detectives Lionel Couture and A. D. Clark of the Homicide Squad said that about 9:40 p. m., a man identified by other residents of the 3d st. home as Reynolds arrived at the door and pushed his way in.

These witneses reported, detectives said, that Reynolds had been drinking. Reynolds said, according to officers, that Bowling had beaten him up earlier in the evening.

One of the residents called police, saying that she had observed that the intruder had a gun. When a police squad arrived a few minutes later, Bowl-

Beltsville Station Typist Found Dead By Rescue Squad

A 34-year-old wife was killed last night by a shotgun blast which struck her abdomen. Her husband is held by Prince Georges County police for investigation of murder.

The woman was identified as Mrs. Hazel Clements, 34, a typist at the Wildlife Section of the Agricultural Experimental Station at Beltsville. Her husband is John Richard Clements, 42, said by police to be a mechanic at McNeil Motors, 1418 P st. nw., in Washington.

The shooting occurred about 7:45 p. m., in their bungalow home at 5318 Gallatin st., Rogers Heights, Md.

She was found by members of the Bladensburg Rescue Squad, first to arrive at the scene. She was clad in a halter and shorts. Police said she was lying on her back in a pool of blood in a hallway of the home, her head facing toward a rear bedroom and bathroom.

Detectives Richard Pearson and Earl Huber said that police later recovered a discharged .410-gauge shotgun in a rear bedroom.

The detectives said Clements told the first officer to arrive that he had been practicing shooting

Capital Greets 2% Sales Tax With Grumbling Reluctance

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

The District's new sales tax, accompanied by new levies on cigarettes and autos, was reluctantly accepted by Washington yesterday. Sales Tax Administrator Allan F. Brooke said the first day of the 2 per cent retail sales tax was "good" and no substantial opposition or confusion was reported.

The initial impact of the taxes was the worst, merchants reported, but as the day wore on, customers began handing over the proper number of pennies with hardly a murmur.

Shoppers and merchants seemed to agree on the taxes as a "necessary evil." "What's the use of complaining?" was the prevalent attitude. "It's here and we're stuck with it." One woman laughingly noted that the city's gain would be the piggy bank's loss.

The taxes provided porch-rockers and bar-stool occupants with something new to grouse about now that the weather has dropped out of the inferno bracket.

Retailers credited the lack of protest to the pioneering done by Maryland and other States in establishing a sales tax and also to the broadness of the local exemptions. "It won't hurt till they buy something big," one retailer pointed out.

Business was reported as about normal in the downtown area by 35 establishments questioned by The Washington Post. No particular spurt in business was noted in nearby Virginia, which has no sales tax.

Maryland retailers welcomed the adoption of the District sales tax as a way of encouraging Free State residents to do their shopping in their own backyard, rather than trekking into Washington to save a few dollars.

Some confusion was reported.

What Meets the 'Private Eye' Often Key to Divorce Decree

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter
(Third of a Series)

The private eye and I started out to catch a married man in a legally untenable position. It was at exactly 4:20 p. m. that we drove slowly past the rear of the Government building.

"There," said the Eye, indicating with the slightest motion of his head a new green Ford parked in a reserved space, "sits the car of the Virginia gentleman."

He drove on past 100 feet and parked at the top of a slight incline, from which he could see the Ford but was not likely to be seen by anyone entering it.

The Virginia gentleman, a Government official, had aroused his wife's suspicions in several ways, such as turning up at home with smudges of lipstick on his face. She had retained the private detective to procure the ultimate evidence, by flashbulb or otherwise, that would get her a divorce—and enough alimony.

Trailed to Woman's Apartment

The Eye would pick the husband up when he got off work at 4:30. He had done this a couple of times before, trailing him to a woman's apartment. He needed a few more times of it before smashing in the door on the pair one fine night.

When and if this happened he would try to have the wife along to witness the final scene. Not before. If he lets the wife accompany him before the evidence is in hand, she is likely to spoil the whole stew by her impetuosity.

The detective pulled his felt hat slightly over his brow. His piercing green eyes never let the low shape of the Ford 100 feet below us out of range.

Husbands, he was saying, can be equally impetuous. Once, trailing a Washington wife and her suspected lover to a hotel, he brought the husband and the husband's brother along.

D. C. Officials Fear "Chaos"

Court Rules Health Officers Require Warrants to Inspect

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

The United States Court of Appeals ruled yesterday that District health officers cannot make routine inspections of private homes without a warrant if the owner or occupant objects.

The court split 2 to 1 in the decision. The majority acted in the face of the District Government's statement that "practical application" of the ruling would result in "chaos." Judge Alexander Holtzoff dissented vigorously to the majority decision.

District officials, after reading the decision, said they feared slum clearance enforcement is in jeopardy, as well as the regular inspection of buildings for such things as structural and plumbing defects.

They are now considering an appeal to the Supreme Court.

The majority based its decision on the constitutional prohibition against unreasonable search and seizure.

Speaking for himself and for Judge James M. Proctor, Judge E. Barrett Prettyman said:

"If private homes are opened to the intrusion of Government enforcement officials, at the wish of those officials, without the intervening mind and hand of a magistrate, one prop of the structure of our system is gone, and an outstanding characteristic of another form of government will have been substituted."

Prettyman called the reasoning of the District government in the case "a fantastic absurdity." He told them that they must get warrants to make inspections.

To their argument that they have no authority under the law as it exists to get warrants in health cases, Prettyman replied:

"The situation may well require immediate representations by the District authorities to the Congress

When Do We Quit? GOP Asks Congress

Cut Overruled

Maritime Commission Funds Fixed

The Senate voted $63,054,424 to meet administrative costs of the Maritime Commission yesterday after turning down a demand by Senator Williams (R., Del.) that this amount be cut $3,152,721.

The total, approved 45 to 43, was recommended by the Senate Appropriations Committee. It is $1,674,000 more than the House voted recently.

In urging a smaller amount, Williams said the commission has been charged with "waste and inefficiency" by the Comptroller General.

But Senator Magnuson (D., Wash.) said the commission is improving the Administration and that the cut Williams wanted would have a serious effect on the merchant marine program.

Congressional Republicans yesterday pressed for a session-end "timetable," as Congress entered its seventh month without any agreement on adjournament and none in sight.

1. In the Senate, Republican Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.) offered to "cooperate" with the Democrats in limiting debate on key bills, if the Democrats would spell out their program.

2. In the House, two Republicans chllenged the "legality" of Congress doing business in August, citing the July 31 Congressional Reorganization Act deadline. Speaker Rayburn overruled their points of order.

Following a White House legislative conference, Senate Democratic Leader Scott Lucas (Ill.) said no definite adjournment date was discussed "and I don't see how one can be at this time."

May Go Into September

Lucas said he "didn't think it possible" for Congress to conclude its business before Labor Day, and it might take it much longer.

Wherry meanwhile offered to help Democratic leaders work out a definite adjournment schedule if Democratic leaders would prepare a worksheet, listing all major bills programmed for action this session.

The GOP leader said he would pass on such a list to the Senate Republican Policy Committee with a recommendation that it cooperate in limiting debate on key bills.

Lucas said he will discuss Wherry's proposition with his own Senate Democratic Policy Committee at a meeting today, but thought a full program agreement unlikely at this time.

Desired Bills Listed

Democratic policymakers already have tentatively scheduled action before adjournment on Minimum Wage, Reciprocal Trade Act extension, displaced persons legislation, a farm bill, the Administration's arms-for-Europe program and possibly a civil rights measure. But the big "must" now holding up action on any of these is a Senate pileup of nearly 27 billion dollars in money measures.

Congress, which already had voted one stop-gap bill to keep fundless agencies operating, meanwhile approved a second. The emergency money bill was rushed to the President after the House accepted a Senate amendment limiting the temporary grant of funds to August 15. The last general money grant ran out Sunday midnight. President Truman quickly signed the new one into law.

Senate leaders, who last week held two night sessions in a futile effort to break the logjam, went back on a day-to-day basis. Night sessions, Lucas said, accomplished nothing. The Senate nontheless sat until 6:30 p. m. on the Independent Offices bill. Senators worked the last 10 minutes in partial darkness. The Capitol power plant broke down.

For the second time in a week, House Republicans tried to block further extension of the present session.

Representatives Charles A. Halleck (R., Ind.) and Ralph E. Church (R., Ill.) cited the Reorganization Act stipulation that Congress adjourn not later than July 31 except in time of war or national emergency, unless Congress extends the session by resolution.

War Still On—Technically

House Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr. (Mass.) made a similar point of order last week. Rayburn again ruled that it isn't necessary to adopt an extension resolution. Technically, he said, the country is still in a state of war and national emergency.

Church contended Mr. Truman would have to call a special session if Congress is to legally remain here. Halleck argued the validity of anything Congress does after July 31 might be open to challenge in the courts.

Senate Republicans, while not making any point of the July 31 adjournment proviso, said the overtime session will receive a full airing at a meeting of their policy committee tomorrow. Under one plan they will discuss, Congress would adjourn August 20 and come back November 15.

Administration leaders, however, said they are determined "to go right through."

House Votes Pension Limit

By The Associated Press

The House yesterday passed and sent to the Senate a bill putting a $10,000-a-year ceiling on pensions for Federal employes who are paid on a fee basis.

In recommending the bill, the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee said it would prevent a former bankruptcy referee, who contributed $7.43 to the Federal Civil Service retirement fund, from getting a pension of up to $17,500 a year.

Bankruptcy referees formerly were paid by fee, and the referee mentioned—but not identified—drew a salary of from $20,000 to $220,000 a year in fees. Referees now are on salaries of not more than $10,000 a year.

They were put into the retirement system by Congress in 1946, and under that law their pensions would be computed on their past incomes, including years when they were paid by fee.

The committee said the bill would affect 20 present referees, and an unestimated number of former referees who now hold other Government jobs. A Federal employe's pension is based on the average of his income for the five best-paid years he spent in Federal servic.

Balkan Peace Treaty Inquiry Demanded by U. S.

The United States demanded yesterday that three Russian satellite states permit impartial, on-the-spot inquiries into charges that they are violating basic human rights.

The three are Romania, Bulgaria and Hungary, which are accused by the United States of breaking the terms of the peace treaties they signed at the end of the war.

Britain also sent similar notes to the three Balkan nations. The demands are expected to be rejected and in that event the United States and Britain probably will carry their case to the United Nations.

Clark Accepts Truman Offer Of Court Post

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Attorney General Tom Clark yesterday accepted President Truman's offer of a place on the United States Supreme Court and Senator J. Howard McGrath of Rhode Island agreed to succeed him as head of the Department of Justice.

The announcement was made by President Truman. It surprised nobody.

It meant that Mr. Truman would have to pick a new chairman of the Democratic National Committee. McGrath said he would resign as chairman as soon as the Senate confirms his nomination to be Attorney General.

William M. Boyle, jr., an old Kansas City friend of Mr. Truman and now executive vice chairman of the committee, leads in the speculation over a successor to McGrath. He was at the White House yesterday when the Rhode Island lawmaker called to tell Mr. Truman that he would be "happy" to join his cabinet.

Two other men have been mentioned in connection with the chairmanship—Paul Fitzpatrick, Democratic State chairman of New York, and Jonathan Daniels, Raleigh publisher and at one time White House press secretary.

The nominations of Clark and McGrath are expected to go to the Senate today. All indications point to early confirmation in both cases.

President Truman announced his choice of Clark for the Supreme Court and McGrath for the post of Attorney General at a news conference last Thursday. He said at the time that both men were so surprised that they asked for a few days to consider their answers.

Clark apparently gave his answer formally at a Cabinet luncheon yesterday in Blair House, although he could have done it by telephone before this.

McGrath called at the White House in the afternoon to tell Mr. Truman of his decision.

Reporters learned about the acceptance of the two men from Mr. Truman himself. While waiting for McGrath, they saw the Chief Executive cross the White House lobby to visit, first, Secretary William D. Hassett, and then Counsel Clark Clifford. They caught him on his way back to his own office. In response to their questions, he said that both men had said "Yes."

Attorney General Clark would succeed Associate Justice Frank Murphy, who died recently.

Murphy was a Catholic, and it was widely believed that his successor would be one. In this connection, the President said at last week's news conference that he didn't feel that religious affiliation had anything to do with a Supreme Court appointment—that the important thing was the candidate's qualifications as a lawyer.

Gov. John O. Pastore of Rhode Island, a Democrat, is expected to appoint Stephen A. Fanning to succeed McGrath for the remainder of this session of Congress. He himself, according to word from Providence, will throw his hat in the ring for the seat in the 1950 election.

Fanning, who lives in Cumberland, R. I., is a lawyer and Democratic state chairman.

House Continues Drinking Ban For Red Men

By The Associated Press

The House decided yesterday that for purposes of drinking firewater, the Indian shall not be put on a par with the white man.

It refused to approve a bill that would have set aside Federal prohibitions against drinking in Minnesota and Wisconsin.

The Federal ban applies to Indians in all States. The bill before the House would have left it in effect in other States.

The bill was killed by a roll-call vote of 168 to 131.

Representative O'Konski (R., Wis.) observed that most Indians "handle liquor a whole lot better than some white people."

But Representative Rees (R., Kans.), an ardent prohibitionist, said the bill was discriminatory and "isn't good for the Indians."

Shakespeare Riot Trial Ends in Hung Jury

Bond was continued at $1000 for the five CIO United Steelworkers officials accused of leading a raid on the Shakespeare companies' plants December 1.

The jury of 10 women and 2 men reported back with a six-to-six deadlock.

Nobility Aids Strikebound Dressmakers

Paris, Aug. 1 (U.P.).—Paris seamstresses voted today to continue their six-day-old walkout, and some of the strike-bound fashion houses are using full-fledged princesses to whip up new frocks for the fall showings.

Princess Edmond de Polignac perched her expensively clad figure on a work stool in the Jacques Fath house and picked at the stitching on a hat with her well-manicured hands. Next to her sat Countess Philippe de Ganay, sewing the hem of this year's Fath wedding gown which will be worn at the opening Friday night by Bettina, most popular mannequin in Paris.

Princess Simone Troubetzkoy, an in-law of Barbara Hutton, rolled up her sleeves and went to work.

The princesses are customers.

The seamstresses, who demand a 5-cent a nhour, wage increase—they now get about 15 cents an hour—stood on the Paris boulevards soliciting contributions to keep their walkout going.

Some drifted back to work to help in the last-minute bustle for the fall openings. About 30 per cent of the seamstresses employed at Christian Dior's returned to work. But the strike was reported still 80 per cent effective.

U. S. Marshal's Advance Stills Red's Lawyer

New York, Aug. 1 (AP).—A fast-talking defense attorney refused to sit down and stop arguing at the Communist conspiracy trial today until a United States marshal advanced on him. Then the lawyer did both.

Federal Judge Harold R. Medina, unable to silence Attorney Richard F. Gladstein, told him:

"Will you sit down or must I call an officer to put you down? Your field day is over."

As Gladstein continued to rattle off an objection to prosecution questions to a defense witness, Medina said:

"Mr. Marshal, will you please see———."

As the law advanced, Gladstein sat down and lapsed into silence. This was broken a moment later when other defense attorneys rose to their feet with new objections.

During the drawn-out trial, now in its 27th week, Judge Medina has expressed exasperation with defense tactics on a number of occasions.

Four of the defendants have been sent to jail for contempt. Three of them still are behind bars when not in court.

Hill Rides Rapids Of Niagara in Drum on 2d Try

Niagara Falls, Ont., August 1 (AP).—Major Hill, 30-year-old daredevil, rode the raging rapids of the Niagara River gorge successfully today on his second attempt in three days.

He went through the swirling waterway in the 625-pound steel drum in which he was injured Saturday when it spun helplessly for 90 minutes in a whirlpool. Hill suffered injuries which kept him in a hospital for the weekend.

Today he decided to try to complete the journey. He went down to the river early this afternoon, but changed his mind and said he would not make a second try today. Then a couple of hours later, he reversed his decision again and stepped into the barrel. Once away, it bounced along in the swift current and carried him to Queenston, 3 miles downstream.

World Bank Loans Finland $12½ Million

The World Bank yesterday granted a $12,500,000 loan to the Bank of Finland, marking its first cerdit to any country in eastern Europe.

The purpose is to finance purchase of equipment and materials required for reconstructions and modernizing Finland's wood products industries, for an electric power development, and for expanding production of limestone powder for agriculture.

Eugene R. Black, new president of the International Bank for Reconstruction Development noted at a news conference that "Finland has a great debt record."

This referred in part to Finland's status as about the only country which has never defaulted on payments to the U. S. for credits granted in the early post-World War I era.

The bank observed with approval that Finland's 15 per cent devaluation of her currency last month "will have a salutary effect" in reinvigorating Finnish exports.

For 15 Years

The loan to Finland, guaranteed by that country's government, is for a 15-year period. It will cost Finland three per cent interest plus a one per cent annual commission the bank charges on all loans for allocation to a special reserve against losses. Amortization repayments are to commence February 1, 1953.

Black said that when the World Bank again issues bonds to raise funds for lending, it is likely to hold them down to around 100 million dollars.

Black also told the news conference he does not expect the bank to seek any additional lending capital "until after the turn of the year." He said he's not sure just when it will want to do so after that. He attached one reservation: He said that an exceptionally strong market for bonds could not be ignored.

Should one develop, he said, the bank's bond-issuing plans would be tailored to fit it.

Borrowing Cut Seen

He said borrowing by the bank is likely to be on a much smaller scale than the 250 million dollars which the bank borrowed in its first and only securities issue about two years ago.

Borrowing by the bank will be matched closely against lending, Black explained, so that the bank will not have to be paying interest charges on borowed money over long periods while it waits to relend this money and thus make net earnings on it.

The bank, he said, now has about 390 million dollars, derived from capital subscription as well as bond issues, still available for loans.

Meanwhile, the World Bank reported that State legislative actions this year have materially increased the number of States in which bonds of the bank are legal investments for various types of investing institutions.

It issued this summary of such 1949 enactments, showing the State acting and the institutions authorized to invest in the bank's obligations:

Arkansas, commercial and savings banks and trust funds; Illinois, insurance companies; Maine, savings banks; Minnesota, nonlife insurance companies; North Dakota, savings banks and trust funds; Ohio, commercial and savings banks, insurance companies and trust funds; Pennsylvania, nonlife insurance companies; Washington, savings banks, and West Virginia, insurance companies. (The Illinois act has not yet been signed by the governor.)

Subject to the qualifications and conditions contained in the various statutes and rulings, the bank's securities now are or soon will be legally authorized investments for institutions as follows:

For commercial banks in 45 States and the District of Columbia; for savings banks in 29 of the 36 States having such institutions, and the District of Columbia; for insurance companies in 36 States; for trust funds in 33 States and the District of Columbia.

The bonds are also a legal investment for all national banks in the United States, under a ruling of the Comptroller of the Currency.

Quitting Berlin

Gen. Howley Going Back To Civil Life

Howley

M. D. Taylor

Berlin, Aug. 1 (AP).—Brig. Gen. Frank L. Howley, the square-jawed Philadelphian who jousted with the Russians for four years as American military commandant of Berlin, is quitting to go back to civilian life.

The United States Military Government for Germany announced it has acceded to his request to be relieved so he can go home next month.

Sources in the military government predicted his successor in Berlin would be Maj. Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, chief of staff for American Army Forces in Europe and former superintendent of the United States Military Academy at West Point.

John J. McCloy, the new United States military governor, in accepting his resignation today, said Howley was entitled to a retirement preference now "in the might of service rendered during a critical period in the history of the city."

Howley, who is 46 and a former advertising executive, explained he is not a career Army man and has no future in the State Department, either. Some friends predicted he would stay in public life, however, probably in Philadelphia politics.

Howley disclosed he had asked to be relieved before the Berlin blockade was clamped on by the Russians more than a year ago. He said he felt, however, he should remain through the airlift era and the eventual lifting of the blockade last May.

West Germany to Get Eight-Member Cabinet

Frankfurt, Aug. 1 (AP).—The new West German state will have an eight-member cabinet when it is formed to replace the present U. S. military government setup.

John J. McCloy, the U. S. military governor for Germany, who made the announcement today, will become civilian high commissioner.

He said the new government's eight major departments will be: Economic affairs, political affairs, military security, labor, intelligence, public affairs, general counsel and administration.

Each of the four German states in the American zone will have a high commissioner serving directly under McCloy. Americans will be placed as observers in each state of the British and French zones.

The American reorganization move is expected to come soon after the August 14 elections which will choose the first West German Parliament.

McCloy is leaving for Washington Tuesday to make a preliminary report on his stewardship and confer on further plans.

Tydings Seeks Fourth Service Academy in Bill

A bill to authorize a fourth service academy was introduced yesterday by Senator Tydings (D., Md.).

It would have the same status as those at West Point, N. Y., Annapolis, Md., and New London, Conn.

No specific location was mentioned. Nor was there any reference to the air service, for which it has been suggested that an academy for officer training be created.

Under the bill, the Defense Secretary could utilize any federally owned land or could acquire private land by donation or purchase.

U. S. Will Stand Firm On German Reparations

By The Associated Press

The United States intends to stand firm on the present reparations policy toward Germany despite increasing German complaints against dismantling, a top Government official said yesterday.

A move has sprung up in the Senate also to ask a new review of the plants slated to go.

The United States, the official said, is convinced that scheduled plant removals will not jeopardize western Germany's economic comeback.

Exiled King Leopold Meets Socialist Leaders

Geneva, Switzerland, Aug. 1 (AP). A delegation of Belgian Socialist leaders met last night and today with exiled King Leopold at his home near Geneva.

Leopold has been in exile since the war and his duties have been taken over by Regent Prince Charles, his brother. The return of the monarch to his throne is a top political issue in Belgium. The Socialists have been generally against it.

Gold Strike Reported

Johannesburg, South Africa (Tuesday), Aug. 2 (AP).—A potentially rich gold strike has been made on Spes Bona Farm in the Hoopstad district of the Orange Free State, directors of general exploration of the Free State said today.

London, Aug. 1 (AP).—A long-standing argument over the ability of a jet fighter plane to intercept a bomber exploded all over the first pages of London newspapers today.

Practically every paper published, with angry comments, a Washington report that in recent joint maneuvers over Britain, British jet planes failed to intercept "obsolete" American B-29 bombers, and that radar defenses failed during the exercises, called Operation Foil.

"To Support USAF Case"

The Daily Herald, organ of the Labor Government, said what purported to be leaks in a secret report on "Operation Foil" were being used to "support the case that the United States Air Force chiefs are making before Congress for approval of their demand for a bigger force of B-36 bombers."

(The dispatch which roused the ire of the British newspapers was published in the New York Herald-Tribune Sunday, from C. B. Allen of the paper's Washington staff. The dispatch stated a secret report on the maneuvers said operations of Britain's best jet fighters against obsolete B-29s resulted in "failure." It was added that the USAF might use the report in support of its B-36 program before the House Armed Services Committee.)

British Experts Dissent

All the newspapers published long reports by their aviation correspondents, who attended Operation Foil, saying the American Superfortresses were simply no match for the British jets, which they called the best in the world.

American correspondents who accompanied the B-29s on their mock raids and fights with British jet fighters were inclined to agree the jets had the better part of the "battle."

Brig. Gen. John B. Ackerman, American air attache, said the report was "not worthy of a statement." A spokesman for his office said, however:

"All reports from our observers seemed to indicate that the jets did make successful interceptions of our B-29 at high altitudes."

Red Leader Offers Jobs to Ex-Nazis If Anti-American

Berlin, Aug. 1 (AP).—An eastern German Communist leader is offering public jobs to former Nazis, if they can prove they're anti-American.

The story was told in the Russian-licensed Nacht-Express, quoting Walter Ulbricht, a major figure in the Soviet Zone East German Economic Commission.

"The time has come for us in the zone to grant national-conscious Germans the positions they deserve in rebuilding our economy," Ulbricht said.

He contended that since Hitler's defeat many formerly active Nazis have changed from their old views and now are becoming acceptable for big jobs in the zone's two-year industrial program.

"Even if they have not completed their conversion, they clearly realize now that the aggressive forces in the United States aim at destruction of the German nation," he said.

Ancient Coins Unearthed

Greek Rebels Losing in War, Truman Says

President Truman told Congress yesterday that the Greek government, with American help, is making "solid progress" toward winning its civil war with the Communists.

He attributed this to improved Greek leadership, accumulating United States military supplies, months of training of Greek soldiers, and "determination, decisiveness and aggressiveness" in the orders of the Greek high command.

Despite the reported progress militarily and in the Greek economy, the President declared that guerilla forces are still strong. He said they are still receiving help from Albania and Bulgaria and that the Greek government remains "entirely dependent" on the United States for weapons to prosecute the war.

The Chief Executive in a report to Congress covering the first quarter of this year said that on March 31 the strength of the guerilla forces was estimated at 19,830 as compared with 26,000 a year earlier.

Dutch to Set Peace Date

Batavia, Java, Aug. 1 (AP).—End of fighting between the Dutch and Indonesian Republicans will be proclaimed Wednesday, the United Nations announced today.

The statement from the U. N. Commission for Indonesia said the actual cease-fire will be set for some days after the announcement of terms by the Dutch and the Republic.

The formal action will call a halt to the hit-and-run fighting that began last December, when the Dutch seized the Republican Capital, Jogjakarta, in what they called police action.

There has been little fighting since the Dutch agreed to allow President Soekarno and other Republican leaders to return to Jogjakarta early last month.

This will be the third cease-fire order of general nature for Indonesia since 1946. Previous orders were violated by both sides.

Romania Ends Welfare Work By Catholics

Bucharest, Aug. 1 (AP). — Romania's Communist-led government today gave all Roman Catholic welfare orders in the country until August 15 to wind up their affairs.

An official announcement said Catholic monks and nuns are no longer needed for welfare work, because the state now takes care of all their former functions.

It said the personnel of some 15 organizations devoted to charity, hospital and other social work among Romanian Catholics is dissolved as of today. Their members are given 15 days to decide on:

1. Retiring to three cloisters and two monasteries set aside for them.
2. Entering old-age homes.
3. Quitting clerical life and registering for regular jobs at local employment bureaus.

Catholic sources said the ban would affect about 1400 nuns and 100 monks, all Romanians except for about 20 foreigners. The Nursing Sisters of St. Vincent de Paul is one of the best known organizations. Most religious Romanians belong to the Orthodox Church. But there are a number of Roman Catholic churches and religious centers.

(Vatican sources said that while the Church had no notification of the action, it came as no surprise. One source said recently the Romanian government aims to wipe out the Roman Catholic faith "from the ground up").

The government said the ban on the Catholic welfare orders was decided July 29, on the basis of a report by the Ministry of Education holding that "all obligations arising from teaching, health and public insurance fall, in accordance with the existing laws, entirely and exclusively upon the state."

Catholics Sue 2 Red Papers For Slander

Vatican City, Aug. 1 (U.P.).—Vatican sources said tonight that the sacred tribunal of the Rota has filed slander suits against two Communist newspapers.

The Rota is the Catholic Church court which handles primarily ecclesiastical matters concerning marriages. Its powers are strictly limited by ecclesiastical law.

The two newspapers, the official Communist organ Unita and the pro-Communist Il Paese, were charged with various acts of defamation and slander in writing that the Rota sold marriage annulments.

Such Communist charges have been frequent, usually based on allegations that wealthy Catholics could always obtain annulments from the Rota.

The Vatican sources pointed out that the Rota does not grant annulments but can only decree in certain cases that the matrimony was invalid and therefore never existed.

Lucas Gives Up

Republicans Only Hope On DP Law

By Robert S. Allen

The Republicans are now the only hope for Senate action on the long-stymied bill to liberalize the "anti-Semitic and anti-Catholic" Displaced Persons Law.

Senate Democratic Leader Scott Lucas (D., Ill.) has thrown in the sponge on the legislation. He has passed the buck to the GOP to force action on it. If they do nothing, the measure is dead for this session.

Passed overwhelmingly by the House three months ago, the bill has been frankly pigenholed in the Senate Judiciary Committee by Chairman Pat McCarran (D., Nev.). He supported the existing law, and is bluntly against the liberalizing bill. Although a majority of his committee is for the measure, he has used his position as chairman to scuttle it.

McCarran has refused to hold hearings, or to allow a vote on the issue. He has made no bones of his intention to do everything in his power to kill the bill.

Lucas and other Democratic leaders have pleaded with McCarran to relent. But beyond these importunities they have made no move to force action. Their explanation is they do not want to antagonize McCarran, for fear he may retaliate on a number of judicial appointments pending before his committee.

So as the only way out of the embarrassing quandary, Lucas has put it up to the Republicans to take the initiative to force the bill out of McCarran's hands.

The only way that can be done is a motion in the Senate to discharge the Judiciary Committee from further consideration of the measure. If such a motion is approved, the bill would be brought directly before the chamber for a vote.

What is done on such a motion depends on Senator Robert A. Taft, (R., Ohio).

He has promised supporters of the bill to demand discharge of the committee if the Democrats balk at that. The Democrats are balking.

House Passes Bill For Armory Site In Greenbelt

By The Associated Press

The House passed a Senate bill yesterday to give the State of Maryland about eight acres in Greenbelt, Md., for a National Guard Armory.

The bill now goes to the President.

Representative Sasscer (Democrat, Md.) said at a recent committee hearing that Maryland is ready to build the proposed armory. The bill provides that if the State fails to use the land for an armory, title would revert to the United States.

U. N. Board Backs World Arms Census

Lake Success, Aug. 1 (NYHT).—A French plan for a world census of arms and troop strength was approved today by the United Nations Commission for Conventional Armaments over Russian objections that it had no other aim than "the collection of intelligence data."

The Russians also objected to the fact that the census does not include data on the atomic bomb.

Semyon K. Tsarapkin, Soviet delegate, said his delegation will kill the proposal with its 31st veto when it comes up in the Security Council

The arms census plan was adopted by an 8 to 3 vote, with Russia, the Ukraine and Egypt opposing it.

Frances' plan calls on each of the 59 members of the United Nations to submit figures on military and para-military forces, active and reserve, on a full-time or part-time basis. All nations would simultaneously submit a census of ground, naval and air forces, paramilitary forces, national police forces and active and reserve components of each.

Figures on the quantities of artillery, automatic weapons, tanks, combatant ships and aircraft and other materiel also would be submitted.

Under central control authority, inspection teams would be given full freedom of movement in entering a member country to conduct spot checks on the authenticity of the reports.

Best Harvest Expected

Berlin, Aug. 1 (U.P.).—Reports from the Russian zone of Germany said tonight the fall harvest there was expected to be the best since the end of the war. Wheat and rye crops were reported 12 to 20 per cent higher than last year's.

Attlee Joins Bevin, Cripps on Sick List At Time of Crisis

London, August 1 (AP).—Prime Minister Clement Attlee joined two of his chief Labor government lieutenants on the sick list tonight, as Britain struggled through an economic crisis.

The bald, scholarly Attlee, who is 66, was confined at his official country home near London with "a bad chill," his wife said.

The Prime Minister has been filling in for ailing Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin and Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir Stafford Cripps, as well as carrying on his own tasks.

Cripps is in a Swiss clinic for treatment of a chronic digestive ailment. Bevin, who suffers from heart trouble and high blood pressure, is resting at Evian, France.

Yanks in Germany May Be Permanent

Heidelberg, Germany, Aug. 1 (U.P.).—American war planes and troops based in Germany may become part of western Europe's permanent defense organization under the Atlantic Pact, officers of the United States joint chiefs of staff indicated today.

Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chief of staff of the Army, said the mission of German-based American troops probably would be worked out on the basis of information gathered during the tour he Admiral Louis Denfeld, Navy chief of operations, and Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg, Air Force chief of staff, are making in Europe.

Vandenberg said German-based American airpower probably would play a part similar to that of the Army in the western European defense organization.

The statements were made after a 90-minute briefing session held at European command headquarters here late today for the visiting American defense chiefs.

Bradley, Denfeld and Vandenberg opened talks with military leaders of western Europe at Frankfurt this morning on the organization of the military might of Atlantic Pact countries into a unified defense force.

They conferred first with Col. Aloyse Jacoby, chief of staff of tiny Luxembourg, and his aide, Maj. Guillaume Albrecht, for 75 minutes.

Next they talked to an Italian delegation, led by Lieut. Gen. Efisio Marras, army chief of staff; Vice Admiral Emilio Ferreri, navy chief of staff, and Lieut. Gen Mario Aimone-Cat, of the air force.

Officers present at the closed meeting said the talks dealt purely with organizational problems. The exact parts to be played by Italy and Luxembourg, or their ideas of the amount of American arms aid they should get, were not discussed, it was emphasized.

The three leaders will fly to Grafenwohr Tuesday for a review of ground and air forces units of the American occupation forces.

Bradley and Vandenberg said after the briefing it was too early to decide specific details of how American troops and planes would be meshed with the defense forces of the European Atlantic Pact countries.

Asked if the role of the American troops was under discussion here Bradley said:

"I suppose their mission will be worked out."

Iceland Deposits Pact Ratification

Iceland yesterday became the seventh nation to deposit its ratification of the North Atlantic pact with the State Department. Icelandic Minister Thor Thors handed in his country's document yesterday afternoon.

Arms Delay Held Perilous

United States' military representatives, by invitation of the Western Union countries (Great Britain, France, Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxemburg), have been closely observing defense planning by those signers of the 1948 Brussels Treaty.

He added, "I think that the preliminary plans" for organization of the defense mechanism to be set up under the North Atlantic Treaty "had pretty well proceeded before the treaty was ratified (by the United States)."

Noting that many Congressmen expressed fear that arms aid now might conflict with future defense plans under the treaty, he said he believed it a "very simple matter to add the additional factors concerned with Denmark, Norway and Italy" to existing defense plans for the Western Union.

(Portugal, Iceland and Canada, which with the United States comprise the balance of the 12 pact signers, have not requested cash arms aid.)

General Marshall, looking physically fit and relaxed after the illness which brought his retirement as Secretary of State last January, testified extemporaneously, without notes.

He discussed the arms program last Friday with planning officials, he said, and while not thorouhgly qualified to speak on legislative details, he regards the plan as "sound."

To fail to approve it, he said, would be to effect "a minor economy which might result in the possibility of a major outlay later on."

Had such a program been in effect in 1939, he said, "we would have cut away at least six months" of World War II, "50 billion dollars, more or less," in costs, and "hundreds of thousands of American casualties."

At the outset of the war, he said, "100 million dollars then" would have had "the same or more effect than a billion dollars later on."

He said he was not saying this as criticism of the Administration or Congress, "for the real issue was the attitude of the American people" who were "considerably affected by the attitude of a vocal and aggressive minority."

The proposed program, he said, "is urgently necessary," and "should be passed without delay."

"I do not think that this weakens our military position," said General Marshall. "As a matter of fact, I think it strengthens it."

Not "Going Whole-Hog"

Asked if he does not feel it calls for too great an outlay without sufficient assurance as to how it will be spent, Marshall said he does not believe it is "going whole-hog."

"You're trying to start the engine up," he said. "You've got to put enough priming in there to get the thing started . . . You have to make a beginning . . . This is really rather a modest beginning . . ."

Pressed to estimate how long military aid to Europe would be required, he said it would take two or three years "to get to a pretty sound state where they could help themselves . . . I'm just guessing."

"We can't continue this thing indefinitely," he said. "Eventually," but not now, it will reduce spending for this country's national defenses, said Marshall.

Several Congressmen have stated there should be "strings" on arms aid because Marshall Plan countries have failed to live up to their agreements on eliminating economic barriers.

General Marshall testified he has been told by Economic Cooperation Administrator Paul Hoffman and Averell W. Harriman, roving Ambassador for ECA, that "very remarkable progress has been made" in removing these barriers.

Harriman, who will testify today, is expected to be closely questioned on this subject.

In addition to aid for Western Europe, the arms bill calls for direct assistance to Greece, Turkey, Iran, Korea and the Philippines, while proponents of new aid to Nationalist China have protested its exclusion from the bill.

Asked by Representative Chester E. Merrow (R., N. H.) for his views on this exclusion, General Marshall—who made a personal, unsuccessful attempt to end the Chinese civil war—said he agrees with Secretary Acheson that further aid is "not feasible" at this time.

"I think that is the answer until the situation is clarified," he said.

In every such action, he said, you must consider "what your participation is going to lead to and where the American people come out on the end."

General Marshall said he does not believe the arms program will lead to an arms race with Russia. "What we've got to get," he said, "is the respect of Russia for the combined strength of the allies."

When asked if the "Soviet threat of forceful aggression" has increased or diminished, Marshall replied, "To me, their course is always entirely unpredictable.

"When you're dealing with a small group of men— I think it is a dozen (the Politburo)—you cannot predict what their course of action will be."

With a smile, he said, "It's a very closed corporation with none of the usual Washington leaks."

Representative George A. Smathers (D., Fla.) inquired if it might not be better to give the money and equipment to a "military pool" rather than individual countries. Marshall said he believed it more practical for this Nation to distribute the aid at present, rather than risk disputes over its division.

General Marshall's testimony appeared to have overcome some doubts about the program. Representative Clement J. Zablocki (D., Wis.) told him his statements "strengthen my views as to the advisability of the program."

Representative Jacob K. Javits (R., N. Y.) declared, "My mind is coming around now to accepting the fact that this is an interim program."

Javits announced, however, that he would seek an amendment calling for:

"A unified command of the forces of the recipient nations and an over-all strategic plan for the security of the area of the United States and such recipient nations."

Marshall said the United States might not find this desirable, but did not expand on his point. Some officials feel, it was learned, that this might require a binding commitment to some form of command which might later prove unwanted.

Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.) was present at the hearing in the role of "observer."

Asked for comment on reported efforts by Senators Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) and John Foster Dulles (R., N. Y.) to induce the Administration to offer a compromise arms plan at about half the presently proposed cost, Connally said:

"There's a lot of fellows for the bill—if you let them write it."

He said the question of beginning Senate hearings will be discussed today.

2. Set aside 50 million dollars for aid to Spain, despite the fact it has never figured in the Marshall Plan.

3. Bars use of ECA counterpart funds by France because of alleged discrimination against American businessmen in French Morroco.

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), who supported Lucas' stand on the legislative character of the amendments in the Senate last week, and appealed from a contrary ruling by Vice President Barkley, withheld comment pending study of the rewritten amendments.

Senator Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.), who lined up with Lucas and Taft, said he also wanted to study the amendments, but told newsmen:

"If they have the same effect as the earlier amendments, I shall oppose them. I think they would be subject to a point of order."

Vice President Barkley, who must rule on any point of order made, meanwhile asked the Senate to put off consideration of the bill until today, to give him time for further study of the rules.

Incidentally, Barkley apologized from the chair to former Vice President Henry Wallace for calling one of his Senate decisions "illogical." In the confusing rules tangle last week, Barkley had followed a Wallace precedent.

Over the weekend he said he looked up the record and found that as a Senator he not only sided with the Wallace ruling, but took the floor in support of it at the time.

"The chair has not yet made up his mind to his own satisfaction as to how clear or muddy this rule is," Barkley told the Senate.

British Seek 25% Of Congo Uranium

Brussels, Belgium, August 1 (U.P.).—The British, seeking to break the American monopoly on atomic bomb manufacture, are demanding one-fourth of the Belgian Congo uranium ore output, usually well-informed sources said today.

The Congo ore has been shipped exclusively to United States atomic plants since the war's end under a Belgain-American contract which expired today.

A source close to the company operating the Congo mine, which reportedly produces 60 per cent of the world's uranium, said shipments to the United States would be curtailed sharpley, as of today, pending a new agreement.

The British reportedly have asked for 3000 tons. Although production figures are secret, informed estimates have placed the yearly Belgian Congo output at about 12,000 tons.

Some 49 per cent of the shareholders in the Shinkolobwe Mine, which produces the bulk of the Congo's uranium, are Britons.

itary and eventual civilian importance.

"Research has pointed toward advancement of the production and development programs, and the provision of fundamental new knowledge as the foundation for future development."

In a statement issued simultaneously with the report, President Truman declared the atomic energy program should "continue to go forward with undiminished momentum and effectiveness."

"I firmly believe that the people of the United States and all who rely on the strength of this Nation have reason for reassurance and faith," he added.

Mr. Truman reported gains "in the production of fissionable materials and in the design and production of atomic weapons to assure the common defense and security."

He said the commission also is looking forward to the use of atomic energy to improve human welfare.

"I believe that our national policy for the vigorous development of atomic energy is sound," the President continued. "It is a balanced policy which makes us stronger from a military standpoint while at the same time it promotes our peacetime goals. It is a policy which has the overwhelming support of the American people."

The report emphasized the extensive exploration taken in conjunction with the Geological Survey. It told of "comprehensive examination of virtually every rock formation in the country, of mine and shelter products, gas and oil wells, and other places where uranium might occur.

The report was written before the now famous Blair House meeting of Atomic Energy and other officials, a spokesman said.

For that reason it made no reference to that meeting or to reports that supplies of uranium from the Belgian Congo and Canada might be reduced unless we shared atomic secrets with the British and Canadians—originally our partners in the atomic development.

The report went into considerable detail about the changes in the operation of company towns such as Los Alamos and Oak Ridge.

It also tells of the deal for the Western Electric Co. and the Bell Telephone Laboratories to take over the Sandia atomic weapons laboratory. Sandia, which operates closely with the Armed Forces, was under the management of the University of California, which operates the Los Alamos scientific laboratory, of which Sandia formerly was a part.

The university wished to get rid of the Sandia part of the job.

The commission reported successful plant tryouts of two new lower-cost methods of processing "feed materials" for fissionable uranium and plutonium.

In the field of medicine and biology, AEC reported:

1. Encouraging trials of the use of atomic by-products for the treatment of pain and distress in two types of heart disease, angina pectoris and congestive heart failure.

2. The first trial on humans of radioactive cobalt, which shows promise of being an inexpensive substitute for radium in treating cancer. About 15 cases of five different kinds of cancer have been treated by Ohio State University researchers, with some tumors being destroyed and others temporarily arrested.

3. Researchers at the University of Michigan are seeking to work out a blood test, similar to the tests for syphilis, to be used to diagnose radiation injuries quickly.

4. The possibility of using hornets to detect radiation leaks in atomic energy devices, because these insects readily absorb one of the by-products of atomic fission.

5. Investigations are now being made into the use of bacteria to help remove dangerous radioactive materials from atomic energy waste—similar to processes used to treat sewage.

6. The successful use of radioactive materials to diagnose male sex hormone deficiencies in victims of the "March of Death" on Bataan in the early days of the war.

Some of these men, the report says, have developed breasts like women as the result of malnutrition and tests showed that starvation had reduced their production of normal male hormones.

7. Development of elaborate safeguards for atomic workers, including an evacuation plan in case of earthquakes.

Mrs. Clements was described as an attractive blonde. Neighbors said the two had moved there recently, were little acquainted in the neighborhood, and have no children.

Mrs. Clements' body was taken to the Gasch funeral home at Hyattsville. An autopsy probably will be performed today.

MILLARD H. SUTTON
. . . veteran of 33 years

Inquiry Near End

The Congressional Atomic Energy Committee yesterday neared the end of its two-month-long investigation of Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper's "incredible mismanagement" charges against the Atomic Energy Commission.

The committee met in closed session with Commission Chairman David E. Lilienthal to study the records of 32 atomic employes.

Sutton New Deputy Fire Chief

Battalion Chief Millard H. Sutton, 57, a popular veteran of 33 years of fire fighting, yesterday was named deputy fire chief by the Commissioners.

Sutton, a 220-pound six-footer, will fill the second deputy chief post vacant since the recent appointment of former Deputy Chief Joseph ("Holy Joe") Mayhew as chief engineer. The appointment was forecast exclusively in the July 7 Washington Post.

Regarded as a ruggedly competent fire fighter, Sutton has had experience with nearly all types of fire equipment and stations.

The other leading contender for the deputy chief post was Battalion Chief William Henry Ronan, 44.

Sutton was born and raised next door to No. 13 Engine Company at 10th and G sts. sw. and literally chased fire engines as a youth. He worked as a clerk on the fish wharf before joining the force in 1916.

He rose in the ranks to battalion chief in 1942 and has been an acting deputy chief since that year.

His advancement paved the way for four promotions:

Capt. Leo (Blackie) Wilson, 47, of No. 12 Engine Company, who has been a fireman 25 years and acting 3rd Battalion Chief the past month, was promoted to battalion chief.

A native of Little Orleans, Md., he lives at 3413 Rhode Island ave, Mt. Rainier, Md.

Lieut. Henry A. Galotta, 39, of No. 8 Engine Company, to captain. A native of New York City, he joined the force in 1933. He lives at 1418 15th st. nw.

Sergt. Harry M. Carver, 41, a duty officer at Fire Department headquarters, to lieutenant. A native of Washington, he joined the force in 1930 and lives at 4934 N. 35th st., Arlington.

Pvt. Sidney C. Morey, 34, to sergeant. Born in Massachusetts he was appointed in 1937. He lives at 1838 M, ne.

Iron Lung Trip For Polio Victim

Mrs. Morris G. Duchin, wife of a Navy lieutenant commander, who was stricken with polio May 9, will be taken from Gallinger Hospital to Baltimore today in an iron lung.

She will begin a long convalescence from the illness from which one of her two children, a daughter 3½ years old is also a sufferer. The child is a patient in Children's Hospital.

Commander Duchin is stationed in Washington and is a brother of Eddie Duchin, the orchestra leader.

The transfer will be in a moving van with a specially trained crew of six men pumping the iron lung by hand. The team works entirely with silent hand signals to keep from disturbing the patient.

Escorts of Washington and Baltimore traffic officers and Maryland State troopers will speed the van through traffic.

Mrs. Duchin will enter Children's Hospital school, which specializes in the rehabilitation of polio victims.

The Duchins have their home at 6445 Fairfax rd., Chevy Chase, Md.

Two Nearby Counties Report 10th Polio Cases

Prince Georges County health officials yesterday announced the county had chalked up its tenth polio victim and ninth victim of Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever.

Meanwhile, Arlington recorded its tenth polio case.

The latest Prince Georges polio case is that of a 12-year-old girl in the 5200 block of Varnum st., Hyattsville. Her case had its onset July 25 and was reported July 29 by the District Health Department, county authorities said. She is in Children's Hospital.

A 7-year-old boy of Clinton, Md., is the latest spotted fever victim. His case began July 6, county officials said, and was reported July 30.

The latest Arlington polio victim is a 6-year-old boy from the 600 block of N. Illinois st., Arlington, who was admitted to Children's Hospital with the disease July 30.

Tuberculosis Death Rate Drops in U. S.

New York, Aug. 1 (AP).—The tuberculosis death rate in the United States last year was 11 per cent under 1947, the sharpest decrease in this country in one year since 1921, the National Tuberculosis Association reported today.

The death rate last year was 29.8 in 100,000 population, as compared with 33.5 in 1947, according to provisional figures made public by Dr. James E. Perkins, managing director of the association.

Dr. Perkins said, however, that the number of new cases reported last year increased. Also, tuberculosis continued to take the lives of more persons between the ages of 15 and 34 than any other disease.

New cases reported in 1947 totaled 133,000, and last year 145,000.

"The increase," Dr. Perkins said, "is undoubtedly due in part to the increasing use of group chest X-ray surveys to find unknown cases."

"Unconstitutional"

Court Upsets Bondsman's License Ban

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday held unconstitutional the withdrawal by District Court of a bondsman's license.

Grounds for the reversal of the ruling by four District Court judges was that the action lacked "the elements of due process of law, i.e., a hearing and revelation of all data upon which a decision is to be based."

Involved was the authorization of John W. Carter, 49, proprietor of a restaurant at 1228 U st. nw., to engage in the bonding business in District Court.

Authorization was granted on November 18, 1947, by District Judge David A. Pine. Several weeks later the judge questioned statements made by Carter in his application and ordered him to show cause why the authorization should not be revoked.

In his application, filled out on advice of his attorney, Carter answered in the negative a question as to whether he had "never been charged and/or convicted of any offense involving moral turpitude." Many years back, it was found, he had been charged with three gambling law violations, and once with receiving stolen property.

After a hearing, the District Court judges revoked the authorization. Carter's attorney had stressed that the bondsman statute and court rules required information only as to convictions and that Carter had never been convicted nor even tried on the charges.

After the hearing the District Court ordered an investigation and "received a report from the FBI and placed it in a sealed envelope," the appeals court opinion handed down by Judge E. Barrett Prettyman stated.

"Six months after the hearing, and without further ado, the court entered an order denying Carter's application."

Judge Prettyman said that while "prior to grant, many processes are available for inquiry and information . . . once granted, the license becomes a right and due process of law must be followed to achieve deprivation."

In a motion filed in behalf of the four District judges, Pine, Alexander, Holtzoff, Richmond B. Keech and Edward M. Curran, the Solicitor General, Philip B. Perlman, had argued the withdrawal of authorization was an administrative function of District Court, not a judicial act, and so not reviewable by the appeals court.

Court Bans D.C. Inspection

for procedural implementation of important public health measures. That is a legislative problem. The function of the courts in situations such as this is to prevent violation by executive officials of constitutional guarantees."

The case arose when Geraldine Little, alias Mildred Parker, refused to unlock the front door of the home at 1315 16th st. nw., at the command of a Health Department inspector who was without a warrant. She was fined $25.

The inspector testified "that there was an accumulation of loose and uncovered garbage and trash in the halls of said premises and that certain of the persons residing therein had failed to avail themselves of the toilet facilities."

The defendant appealed, and the Municipal Court of Appeals reversed her conviction. The case was then taken to the United States Court of Appeals, which affirmed the Municipal appeal decision.

In commenting on regulations providing that the occupant of any part of any premises is required to keep that part clean and wholesome, Prettyman wrote:

"By what standard and at what time of day is this perfection to be tested? And under what combination of domestic circumstances?

"Is the unassisted, overworked, overwrought mother of small, uninhibited children to have less privacy to work out her family difficulties than the unencumbered bachelor in his serviced apartment?

"Whim of Zealous Officer"

"Is the evening radio hour to be at the whim of a zealous officer making bacteria counts on dinner dishes in the kitchen sink?"

"Is the informality of a lone housewife doing the morning chores to be embarrassed by the unpreventable company of a benign, but nevertheless strange, searcher for the unclean and the unwholesome?

"These are extreme examples, perhaps, but they are no sillier than the precise words of the complaint in the present case, and we are dealing with doctrines and not with the presumable taste and sense of individual officials.

"It may be that the boundary of the curtilage is no longer the outpost of man's domestic independence," he said. "It may be that a transom is debatable access. But even if the front door of the house is no longer protected by the Constitution, surely it had been thought until now that the bathroom door is."

The court said that in times of public epidemic or where persons known to have communicable diseases are at large, preventive measures might include searches without warrants.

Holtzoff in Dissent

In his dissent, Judge Holtzoff declared that the constitutional provisions as to unreasonable search applied to criminal cases and not to health inspections.

"Representatives of the Fire Department require no search warrant to enter a house in order to extinguish a blaze, even if owner objects to their presence," he said. "In many instances, it is proper for public authorities to enter a building to suppress a nuisance, such as a noisy gathering disturbing the peace of the neighborhood."

Holtzoff stated that it has always been "assumed" that health officers need no search warrant.

"On the basis of the conclusion of the court in this case, these officers may have to suspend their function of inspection until and unless the Congress passes an act authorizing the issue of search warrants for this purpose," he said.

hurt anymore."

It was then about 8 p. m. Wednesday, Mrs. Chiles sand. She returned to their apartment, received a call around midnight that her husband was dying. She went back to the hospital and stayed until 4 or 5 a. m., when a chaplain sent her home.

The young officer died at 9:20 a. m.

Lieutenant Chiles will be buried with military honors at 9:30 a. m. today in Arlington Cemetery.

Mrs. Chiles said she believes that exhaustion from travel brought on her husband's death.

The couple drove here from her Memphis, Tenn., home, leaving July 14 and arriving on the 17th. They searched three days for an apartment, found one, and then drove back to Memphis.

There they picked up the children and, with brief respite, drove here again. Lieutenant Chiles reported for duty at Anacostia Naval Air Station Monday, July 25.

He was apparently in "perfect shape" Tuesday, she said, but complained of feeling tired. It was then he went to the dispensary for a checkup. The bulbar polio diagnosis was made about 8 p. m. at Bethesda Naval Hospital.

A native of Lakeland, Fla., he entered the Navy in 1942, won his wings at Pensacola, December 11, 1945. He had spent three years overseas, and had arrived here July 24 for his first tour of shore duty.

Polio Insurance Requests Rise

New York, Aug. 1 (AP).—New York insurance brokers reported today they are swamped with applications for a new low-cost polio insurance. The city has had 336 cases reported since July 1.

Continental Casualty Co. of Chicago introduced the new policy two weeks ago. A $10 premium will cover an entire family for two years. The company pays all expenses incurred in connection with polio up to $5000 in any one case.

The number of policies written here to date are estimated at about 8000. Throughout the country Continental has issued about 65,000 in two weeks.

25,000 Vote Today In Nearby Virginia

By Richard L. Lyons
Post Reporter

About 25,000 voters are expected to turn out in the Alexandria-Arlington-Fairfax area today for the primary that will select nominees for local posts as well as for governor and other state offices.

Alexandria Democrats will nominate candidates for city sergeant, commissioner of revenue, and justices of the peace.

Fairfax County Democrats will nominate one of three candidates for the Fairfax-Falls Church House of Delegates seat. County Republicans will pick their nominee from two candidates running in the first Republican primary held in the county for state delegate.

In Arlington, State Delegates J. Maynard Magruder and George Damm, and County Board Member Basil De Lashmutt, all Democrats, are unopposed. Their names, however, will appear on the ballot.

Five Alexandria officials who are unopposed already have been declared the Democratic nominees. Their names will not appear on the ballot. They are: State Delegate Armistead L. Boothe, Commonwealth's Attorney Howard W. Smith, jr., City Treasurer Roger C. Sullivan, Civil and Police Court Judge James R. Duncan and Juvenile and Domestic Relations Court Judge Marion B. West.

Here is the lineup of contested elections:

In Fairfax the three Democrats seeking nomination for House of Delegates are: W. Lewis Leigh, 41-year-old Oakton attorney; Edwin Lynch, 36, Annandale real estate man who held the seat from 1945 to 1947, then lost it by one vote; John J. McLaughlin, 39, Centerville hardware merchant whose principal platform plank is the legalization of horse racing in Virginia.

The two Republican candidates for the Fairfax-Falls Church delegate nomination are: Douglas A. Clark, a Washington attorney who lives in Merrifield, and Kent Godfrey, 44, of 113 Westmoreland dr., Falls Church, a Falls Church real estate man and member of the County Republican Committee.

In Alexandria, Commissioner of Revenue Charles A. Callahan, 56, of 15 W. Rosemont ave., is opposed by William E. Sellers, 54, a railroad employe who lives at 106 E. Del Ray ave. Callahan has held the office without opposition since 1944, and was deputy commissioner under his father for 20 years.

Alexandria City Sergeant J. Frank Moriarty, 51, faces opposition from Walter Hugh Travers, 36, former employe of the State Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, who lives at 1206 N. Pitt st. Moriarty was deputy sergeant for 19 years before assuming the job on the death of Claude Fletcher last spring. He lives at 1907 Commonwealth ave.

Alexandria also will elect members of the City Democratic Committee, none of whom is opposed, and justicies of the peace.

There are contests for the post of justices in the First and Fifth Wards. The three seeking one post in the First Ward are James R. Carver, 609 Princess st.; William Hobart Little, 118 N. Fairfax st.; and F. C. Pullin, 230 N. Royal st.

The Fifth Ward contest is between Michael P. Frasca, incumbent, of 8 W. Spring st.; and Francis C. Treger, 21 W. Linden st.

Virginia Votes Speak Today

of Spottsylvania; State Senator M. M. Long of Wise County; State Senator Mosby Perrow of Lynchburg, and Attorney General J. Lindsay Almond of Roanoke.

Miller, whose mission in the race is to oust the "Byrd machine," told his listeners that "dollars cannot decide this contest."

"No fight that is worth winning can be won with paid mercenaries," Miller said. "Our movement cannot be defeated because it is composed of volunteers—of men and women who work for the love of the cause—who regard it as an indignity to the State of Virginia to work for a candidate just because someone has slipped them a 20-dollar bill or a 50-dollar bill."

The "Democratic forces" in the "antiorganization" wing of the party seek to "get control of the party and of the State government in order that the government may be taken from the Byrd machine and returned to the people to whom it belongs," Miller declared.

Senator Byrd demanded from Washington that Robert M. Hazelwood, campaign manager for Arnold, name the person who offered him (Hazelwood) $10,000 to desert Arnold in favor of Battle in the campaign.

Hazelwood made the remark to a reporter here last night following an Arnold rally. He said the proposal had been made "by a prominent Richmond contractor." The man had requested that his name be withheld, "and this I agreed to do," Hazelwood said.

At his Richmond headquarters, Miller cited a Roanoke World-News story to refute a charge by Attorney General Almond that Miller attended a "secret CIO meeting" in Roanoke in 1946.

Almond made the charge last week to support his contention Miller is supported by out-of-State labor interests. He said a record of the meeting could be found in the Roanoke newspaper files.

The World-News said in a published story that it has no record of having reported such a meeting in 1946. It said there was a meeting of "anti-Byrd" men in 1947, arranged by Martin A. Hutchinson and Moss Plunkett, Almond's opponent in the contest for attorney general.

Arnold has termed the main issue of the campaign whether the people want a businessman who has been trained to operate his own business on an economical, efficient, basis, or a politician "whose only idea is to spend money, raise taxes, and build up a machine that will keep him in public office."

It was generally acknowledged that a total vote of well under 300,000 would be favorable to Battle, while Edwards would profit by a heavier turnout because of his reliance on many "silent votes." It was also conceded that the bigger the vote, the better the chances of Miller.

Overshadowed by the gubernatorial race is the Democratic contest between L. Preston Collins, incumbent, and Nick Prillaman, mayor of Martinsville, for lieutenant-governor.

In the only statewide Republican contest, E. Thomas McGuire, Petersburg insurance man, opposes Berkeley Williams, former Richmond postmaster, for lieutenant-governor.

After-Theater Hop From N. Y.

By Richard L. Coe

PEOPLE AND PLACES: American Airlines have skedded an "after-theater" flight from New York to Washington, leaving Gotham at 12:30 ayem Daylight Time and dropping into Nataip't at 1:40 . . . AA's Herbert D. Ford says 'tis for "increasing demands for an after-theater flight." . . . I hear of another trick trip: a Connie B. Gay special train to Nashville for the Grand Ole Opry, coming soon . . . Roy Rogers claims that Westerns are a good thing, for, apart from earning him a rajah's riches, "they are downright healthy and constructive; the plot typically involves little more than the triumph of a law and order, decency and clean living." . . . Isn't this true of all MPA-sealed movies AND Shakespeare?

WHEN "He Walked by Night" played the Warner, I let loose a tirade against it; thought it sheer, sadistic brutality . . . Now it's been declared "The year's best crime picture" at the Locarno's International Film Festival . . . I'm not sure whether that's an honor or a disgrace . . . Ray Dooley was here last week with her husband, Eddie Dowling, and a treat it was to see her; remember her in all those "Follies" and "Thumbs Up?" . . . A grand comedienne was Ray, as were all such good Ziegfeld comics as W. C. Fields, Will Rogers, Fannie Brice, Julius Tannen, so where's this idea Flo had no use for comics? . . . The Dowling-Dooley daughter is Mary Maxine, and she's madly stage-struck . . . A lively teen-ager, Mary Maxine has been going to convent school, can't wait to be a musical comedy star like Dad and Mum.

C. U. has its last summer play Wednesday night, "The Barber of Seville," from which Beaumarchais comedy Rossini got its operatic masterpiece . . . Dick Sykes has made an adaptation from the original which will run at C. U. for a week . . . Rumer Godden is raging at movie-makers both sides of the Atlantic . . . She despises "Enchantment," which Sam Goldwyn made from her novel, "Take Three Tenses," and abhorred the British version of "Black Narcissus." . . . So she's sold her novel on India, "The River," to Hollywood's Independent Kenneth McEldowney and will do the script herself.

A BENEFIT to aid the Interchurch Fellowship of Washington campaign for a theater will be given tonight at Meridian Hill Park's theater, with Edith Atwater and Helmut Dantine starring in "No Time for Comedy." . . . Tickets at NOrth 9398 or the box office . . . The W. C. Fields bill at the Little holds over for a second whang-dang week . . . Valerie Warde, who's been vacationing from her dancing school up in Maine, couldn't stay away from the Lakewood Theater and wound up in a couple of shows.

WTOP's Hazel Markel signed for her annual Olney role—which will be in Moss Hart's supporting cast for "The Man Who Came to Dinner" the week of September 20 . . . Philip Jones, once British information officer here, takes over as films and publications officer after a tour of duty in the Argentine, succeeding Nevile Gardiner, who's about to take up his new duties at the British Embassy in The Hague.

BETCHA Frank Morse will come off his yacht to see his old friend Ruth Chatterton open at Olney tonight in Dodie Smith's comedy, "Lovers and Friends." . . . Poor Stiano Braggiotti, Ruth's leading man, won't be seeing his sister, Francesca, though . . . That lady, Mrs. John Davis Lodge, is now in Europe with the Congressman's two daughters, Lily and Beatrice.

"ANNA LUCASTA" will have to close Thursday night at the Howard, because the theater is booked for the next week; but it's been a well-filled holdover run for the Philip Yordan play . . . Margaret Perry, Antoinette's daughter, followed in her skilled, late mother's footsteps by directing the Barter Theater's "Count Your Blessings," which Carl Allensworth comedy is having its world premiere this week.

CONCERT MAESTRO Pat Hayes, his pianist-wife, Evelyn Swarthout, and family off to holiday on the Jersey coast, but I'll bet Pat tries to slip up to Mount Kisco, N. Y., where his pal, Burl Ives, this week is playing "The Man Who Came to Dinner." The 19 millionth member of a St. Louis Muny Opera audience last week passed through the gates.

Judge Studies Assault Case

Bethesda Police Court Judge James R. Miller yesterday took under advisement the case of Paul J. Spivak, 26, accused of kissing and fondling the 12-year-old daughter of his landlady.

Police said the charge of simple assault against Spivak arose July 27 at the home of Mrs. Elsie Norton, 5305 Baltimore ave., Bethesda, where he rooms. Mrs. Norton swore out a warrant against him after her daughter, Joan, complained Spivak had accosted her in the kitchen.

In court yesterday, Spivak denied the charge. He was freed in $500 bond.

Perkins Takes Oath As State Dept. Aide

George W. Perkins, of New York, was sworn in yesterday as Assistant Secretary of State in Charge of European Affairs.

Perkins, formerly chief of the industries division for the Economic Cooperation Administration at Paris, served as colonel in the Army Chemical Warfare Service in the European and Pacific theaters during the war.

BILL POWELL'S AIDE: Dorothy Hart used to be a magazine cover girl. Now she's landed in the movies and you'll see her at the Capitol next week in "Take One False Step," the new William Powell adventure in crime

Meridian Hill

Edith Atwater, Helmut Dantine Are Effective in Behrman Play

S. N. BEHRMAN'S literate prose is on the Meridian Hill Park stage to beguile the mind. With Edith Atwater and Helmut Dantine playing the leads in "No Time for Comedy," all that you need for complete relaxation is a pillow to bewitch the other end of you.

Miss Atwater and Dantine are most acceptable as Behrman's actress wife and playwright husband whose marriage is jeopardized by a married lady addicted to improving men other than her own husband.

Miss Atwater, whose bearing is youthful and handsome, gives the part gentle sincerity and pervasive humor, which is precisely what it demands. Dantine makes of the superficial playwright the eternal boy Behrman imagined. They are a facile, effective costarring team.

In "No Time For Comedy" Behrman is discussing one of the hidden shoals of matrimony—the unseen danger which arises when a third party sees in one of them qualities which are not there. Gaylord Easterbrook (this is a literate comedy) has achieved great success writing tinkling vehicles for his wife. Now, in her ivory tower, a rich woman tells him he is deeper than the world has credited him. What she wants, to be sure, is an antidote for her unimaginative husband. Yes, it's our old friend The Triangle, but dressed in the sheen of Behrman's words.

However, Behrman's traingle was more equilateral than we are seeing at Meridian Hill, where the familiar pattern has become very isosceles indeed. For Barbara Joyce's satin-minded other woman is considerably more like my favorite waitress in Child's (and a very honorable and amusing person she is) but hardly the type to be married to a dry banker with prep-schooling sons, let alone attract a playwright who presumably has worked his way through the gaga stage of ladies. Though Miss Joyce gained her admirers last night, she elicited only my astonishment.

As the ointment-fly's husband, Joseph Allen, jr., brings good humor to the role; can this be the J. Allen, jr., who played in all those Paramount pictures not so long ago? He looks as though he might be and he does nicely by the put-upon Philo. John Bryant, whom I unintentionally passed over last week on his able appearance in "The Time of Your Life," has a brief but effective scene as a Behrman observer and Russell Foster completes the cast.

A word, too, for the open-air stage's two settings, which are surprisingly reasonable suggestions of Upper Bracket Home Life. Considering the space limitations, Howard Barker has done a fine job with his sets, as indeed he did for Saroyan's bar last week.

The Behrman lines and his impeccable observations of mannered people are neatly delineated by Miss Atwater and Dantine. It's a placid, polite week at Meridan Hill, but surely a pleasant one.

Society Matron Found Murdered

Charlotte N. C., Aug. 1 (U.P.).—An elderly society matron was shot to death and her butler seriously knifed and beaten here today, and police began a search for a former servant.

Police Chief Frank M. Littlejohn would not name the "chief suspect" in the death of Mrs. Essley Anderson, 68. But he said the man was a former convict and had served time for draft evasion.

Mrs. Anderson, a familiar figure in Charlotte society, was found blasted to death by a shotgun charge, her body crumpled on a bloodsmeared rug in her upstairs bedroom.

The butler, 48-year-old William Randleman, was slumped almost unconscious in his quarters at the rear of the house. His throat was cut and he had been severely beaten about the head.

Police said Randleman was unable to talk because of his condition. They posted a two-man guard by his hospital bed.

Littlejohn said the attack occurred early this morning, probably a short time after Mrs. Anderson's husband, a prominent automobile dealer, left for work.

Officers found the murder weapon downstairs, reloaded and with a box of fresh cartridges lying nearby. The gun belonged to Anderson, they said.

Littlejohn pointed out that the assailant apparently knew exactly where to look for the gun, usually kept in an upstairs closet.

Mrs. Boettiger Gets Divorce In Arizona

Phoenix, Ariz., Aug. 1 (AP).—Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Boettiger, daughter of the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt, today was granted a divorce from John Boettiger.

Judge Renz L. Jennings of the Superior Court here granted the divorce in proceedings which lasted less than 15 minutes.

Mrs. Boettiger, 43, appeared at the judge's chambers with her attorney. Boettiger, 49, was not present.

He had filed for divorce charging mental cruelty. Mrs. Boettiger, in a cross-complaint, stated Boettiger had deserted her more than a year ago. He did not answer the cross-complaint.

A property settlement had previously been made.

Mrs. Boettiger obtained custody of a son, John, 10, and $100 per month for his support. She had made no request for alimony.

She has two other children by a previous marriage to Curtis Dall, New York broker. The two, Anna Eleanor and Curtis, were known nationally as Sistie and Buzzie when they lived at the White House.

Boettiger is now a vice president of Theodor Swanson & Co., public relations firm.

The Boettigers were married in 1935. They first met in 1932 on a presidential campaign trip when he was a reporter for the Chicago Tribune. Later he became publisher of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

After the war, the two published the Arizona Times, an afternoon daily newspaper which they started here. They sold their interests last year.

Crooks Return Money

Chicago, Aug. 1 (U.P.).—Lawrence White, 24, New York Metropolitan Opera tenor, reported to police that two robbers held him up today and debated for several minutes whether they should keep the $2.40 he surrendered.

"It would make carfare," White quoted one robber.

"Naw, I guess he needs it more than we do," the other robber replied.

White said they handed the money back and fled.

Widow Loses Bid to Recover Art Collection

Mrs. Charlayne Whiteley Gellatly, widow of John Gellatly, eccentric New York art collector, yesterday lost another round in her fight to recover a four million dollar art collection given to the Smithsonian Institution by her husband at his death in 1931.

The United States Court of Appeals upheld a June 10, 1948 decision of District Court Justice Matthew F. McGuire that the gift to the Smithsonian was valid.

The appeals court decision was the third setback for Mrs. Gellatly. In 1948 the Court of Claims held that there was no legal basis to set aside the gift to the Smithsonian.

Kissing Wife Costs $12.50

Cain insisted on getting into the act.

Masigtrate Hazard, meanwhile, said he knew the Trabings. He said he knew they ran an orderly place. Never was an arrest there before, he said.

"The fine," he told Miffleton, "isn't for kissing your wife, but for disorderly conduct afterward."

But, he admitted, the kiss was the start of it all.

Hutchinson Approved For Agriculture Job

The Senate Agriculture Committee yesterday unanimously approved the nomination of Knox T. Hutchinson, Murfreesboro, Tenn., farm operator, to be Assistant Secretary of Agriculture.

The post has been vacant since last year when Charles F. Brannan was elevated to Secretary.

Woman Heads Times-Herald

the New York Daily News, as chairman of the board.

By telephone from New York, last night, Mrs. Miller said that the Times-Herald will pursue a "good American policy like we have on our little paper out West," but that "this has come so suddenly there hasn't been time to discuss it much."

She said that she expects to move here in January. Most of her time until then, she said, will be spent in Illinois "fixing it so the people back there won't miss us too much."

Mr. Miller now is publisher of the Illinois daily of which his wife is president.

Colonel McCormick said that W. C. Shelton, one of the seven heirs to the Times-Herald, will remain as business manager, and Frank Waldrop, another heir, as editor-in-chief.

The attractive and youthful new executive of the Times-Herald has a heritage which extends back into the newspaper business and Republican politics. She always has been surrounded by wealth.

Her father was the late Medill McCormick, once editor of the Chicago Tribune, and later a Senator from Illinois. Her mother was the late Ruth Hanna McCormick Simms, a vital political figure, as well as a former newspaperwoman. Mrs. Simms, after Senator McCormick's death, ran for his seat, but was defeated. Then she became a member of the House of Representatives, and while there met, and later married, Albert Gallatin Simms, a Representative from New Mexico.

Mrs. Miller is a granddaughter of the late Senator Mark Hanna of Ohio, close adviser of President McKinley.

She was a guest Sunday at a party at the C. E. Tuttle farm in the Green Spring Valley area, near Baltimore. It was there that Colonel McCormick made the first announcement of her selection to head the Times-Herald.

A graduate of Bennington (Vt.) College, Mrs. Miller has been active in the Young Republican movement in Illinois.

Mrs. Miller began her newspaper career as a reporter in Rockford, Ill., where her mother once operated newspapers. In January, 1947, she and her husband, whom she married in Rockford in 1941, bought the LaSalle (Ill.) News-Tribune and the nearby Peru (Ill.) News Herald, and merged the two. They are now published for LaSalle, Peru and Oglesby, Ill.

Mrs. Miller met her husband in 1939 when she was a reporter at Rockford, and he was an economics student at the University of Chicago. They now have a daughter, Kristie, 4½, and a son, Mark, 2.

On May 21, 1945, she was elected a director of the Chicago Tribune Co., succeeding her mother, who had died five months before. She has served as a member of the Illinois State Teachers College Board, and was an organizer and official of the Illinois Epilepsy League.

Flynn is a native of Iowa and a graduate of the University of Missouri, in 1924. From 1926 to 1929 he was in Tokyo as a correspondent and employe of an English language paper there. He then joined the New York Daily News, and has been with that paper ever since, except for two years, 1931 to 1933, as business manager of the Detroit Mirror.

He first was assistant manager of the News, became business manager in 1938, general manager in 1946, and president, succeeding the late Capt. Joseph M. Patterson, in 1947.

PRR Veterans Win Appeal

Pennsylvania Railroad trainmen who are war veterans have a right to seniority in transfers from either passenger or freight jobs, the United States District Court of Appeals decided yesterday.

The decision reversed in part the ruling of District Court in July, 1948. The lower court had held that transfer of freight trainmen to passenger service was proper without seniority loss, but that passenger men could not transfer their seniority to the freight branch. Yesterday's ruling stated that returned veterans could compute their seniority from the date they entered military service.

The decision, according to John W. Cragun, attorney for some 90 military veteran passenger trainmen, who wish to return to freight service with seniority intact, will affect several hundred trainmen of the road's Maryland Division.

Negro Saved From Ga. Mob

Nashville, Ga., Aug. 1 (AP).—A Georgia sheriff today told of taking a Negro from a mob bent on avenging the attempted rape of a housewife.

Sheriff N. N. Hughes said the man was in no way connected with the attack on the 40-year-old farmer's wife. The mob believed the Negro could lead them to a suspect and intended to make him do so.

For a time, Hughes reported, the situation "looked pretty bad," with mobs roaming the streets, finally consolidating into a crowd of around 1500.

"I told 'em," said the sheriff, "that we had good Negroes here and bad Negroes, and we were going to see that the good ones were protected. I told 'em that they were going to get themselves in more trouble than they would ever get out of."

As for the Negro, Hughes observed that he "was just about as cool as anyone you'd ever seen.

Virginia Votes

The most interesting and significant fact about the Democratic Party primary in Virginia today is the expectation that it will lure between 300,000 and 350,000 voters to the polls. This may not seem a phenomenal figure in a State where the Democratic nomination is considered tantamount to election in November and which has a population of nearly three million. But when one recalls that voting in Virginia is cribbed and confined by a poll tax requirement and that the gubernatorial primary four years ago brought only 168,000 to the polls, the symptoms of a real contest seem evident. It appears to be open season in Virginia, long deemed the ideal Byrd sanctuary.

Virginia's poll tax, of course, provides a measure of protection for the Byrd organization. It has to be paid early in May to make a citizen eligible to participate in the August primary. This is extremely advantageous to the machine, the efficient organization of which sees to it that they are paid up before the deadline. Virginians less fond of the machine are apt to overlook the May prerequisite and thus find themselves disfranchised when August rolls around. It is perhaps revelant to note in this connection that the Virginia State payroll, despite vehement and persistent pleas for economy on the part of Virginia's senior Senator, has risen from $1,350,000 for the month of April, 1940, to $3,309,000 for April, 1949.

Nevertheless, the Byrd organization appears to be anxious for the first time in at least a decade. And perhaps this is a very good thing. If the turnout today is as great as anticipated, it may herald a revitalization of democracy in Virginia which must be acclaimed by all Americans, and especially by the voteless residents of the District of Columbia.

The Time Is Now

Special commendation goes to the two freshmen members of the House—Hugo Sims, jr., and Tom Steed—who induced the Labor Committee to try once more to get the education bill out on the floor. Chairman Lesinski had said that the bill was dead for this session. Some other committee members, along with Speaker Rayburn, seemed to agree that the bill was too hot to handle. But the two freshmen legislators induced the committee to meet again this morning and give itself another opportunity of screwing up its courage and sending the issue to the House.

The argument for dropping the bill at the present session of Congress is that the controversies on the extrinsic as well as the intrinsic merits of the bill may have subsided by next year. This is wishful thinking of a dangerous sort. It cannot reasonably be supposed that the sponsors of this constructive effort to draw upon Federal funds to patch the weakest parts of our public education systems will give up their objective because it has met with determined opposition. Nor is it likely that the foes of Federal aid to education will withdraw from the field so long as the question remains unsettled. Nor will postponement assuage the church-state conflict. Instead of subsiding, the controversies are thus likely to spread until a decision has been reached, and it would not be surprising if the acrimony surrounding those controversies should be intensified. Since 1950 is an election year, Congress would fly into the face of all experience if it should assume that emotions would be less aroused and judgments more trustworthy then than now.

It is true that the problem is very difficult. The sponsors of Federal aid to education are divided between the Thomas bill passed by the Senate, which would allow the States, where their laws permit, to use Federal funds for bus service and nonsectarian textbooks for children in parochial schools, and the Barden bill, which would deny any such auxiliary aid to either public or private schools. These differences can be resolved, however, if those who are interested in buttressing the education systems of the States have the courage of their convictions. They can subordinate the relatively minor differences between the two bills to the major objective of getting an education measure on the statute books.

While we think the Thomas bill is preferable, a favorable House vote on the Barden bill would send the two measures to conference, where a satisfactory compromise could doubtless be worked out. The important thing at the moment is for the House Labor Committee to act. We think it is important not only from the viewpoint of improving schools in backward areas but also for the sake of withdrawing fuel from interdenominational feuds that, if allowed to gather momentum, will undermine the foundations of our American society.

Policy In The East

The announced quest for a new policy toward Asia is no doubt based upon the need to encompass the fresh situation in China. New realities have to be faced, new assumptions made; and the free world is waiting upon the American lead. The Administration in sending Mr. Marshall to China in 1945 proceeded on the assumption that a civil war was preventable. This turned out to be wrong—that a combination of a historical process of dynastic change going back to the T'aip'ings in the 60s and a Spenglerian revolt against Western man and Western institutions was bound to explode. The assumption governing the succeeding policy of intervention on the side of Chiang Kai-shek, laid down by Congress, was equally wrong. The assumption was that somehow the aid would save Chiang from the consequences of his mountainous follies and conceits and smother the revolution. It is against this background that a new policy is in course of formulation.

The job of recommending a new policy is in competent hands. Ambassador Jessup is quick-witted and broad-minded, while his two aides, Raymond B. Fosdick and Everett N. Case, are men of both experience and judgment, though they seem to have been chosen because they are above the battle between opposing schools of thought on the China question. Their task is unenviable. For Chinese communism, like China itself, is no black and white affair, but a spectrum in which there is a lot of Red but in which the prevailing color is gray. The common view in the capital in which this study is being conducted, however, is that Chinese communism is wholly and completely made-in-Moscow. We don't share it. An unemotional appraisal of the new regime in China will show, we feel, marked deviations from Moscow in history and leadership and manifestation. Communism in China has indigenous roots which were wholly lacking in the communism that saddled itself on Russia. Communism was imposed on Russia from the outside—by a group of intellectual Marxists of all races and nationalities, all of whom were far more cosmopolitan than Russian, and who, abetted by the Germans, took advantage of a vacuum of power to weld together a rabble of disaffected soldiery and factory workers. They imposed a revolution on agrarian Russia, first with the help of the patriotic fervor that the foreign powers provoked in Russia against their intervention and then by collectivization. Chinese communism, on the contrary, is operated by Chinese who are chaneling a pre-existing revolutionary situation and exploiting a Chinese condition arising from the chronic inability of a fragmented agriculture to support a teeming population. In China, as in all Asia, the dictum of Burke is applicable: "General rebellions and revolts of a whole people never were encouraged, now or at any time; they are always provoked."

The link that keeps the Chinese Revolutionists together is the common hatred of the "foreign devil" which is almost instinctive with the Chinese. This link has been strengthened already by the military intervention enacted last year by Congress. More adventuring of this sort on Chinese soil will infallibly produce more revolutionary strength. It would aid Mao Tze-tung by giving more reality to his battle cries against the foreign devil and aid Stalin by frittering away American resources and bogging down American strategy. There was more chance of killing the Bolshevist coup at birth than of killing this more authentic revolution in China. Yet the British and other interventionists in Russia after the first World War did not succeed. On the contrary, their support of the Koltchaks, the Wrangels, the Seminovs bolstered Russian Bolshevism. The Russian masses, as a result of the intervention, began to identify this alien Bolshevism with the protection of their beloved motherland. Here were laid the seeds that came to harvest in what Stalin called "the great patriotic war." It would be hard to make the Chinese Communists more nationalist by more intervention because in this respect they are already extreme. What is possible is that more intervention would tighten the tie between this Nationalist communism of China and the ultracentralism of Moscow when policymakers should be thinking of ways and means of loosening and eventually of breaking it. This is the riddle that has to be solved. But the only chance of solving it is with the head, and there is no chance at all with military arms.

Tideland Compromise

Speaker Sam Rayburn is reported to be working on a compromise bill respecting the so-called tidelands—the submerged area, rich in oil, off the coast of the United States between the low-water mark and the 3-mile limit which is more accurately designated the marginal sea. There has been bitter controversy about these offshore oil deposits between State governments and the Federal Government. So far as the submerged lands adjacent to California are concerned, the Supreme Court has declared authoritatively that paramount rights and dominion are vested in the United States. The lands off Texas and Louisiana are now the subject of litigation. Spokesmen for the States have been trying desperately to persuade Congress to nullify the Supreme Court decision by relinquishing the Nation's claim to all these lands.

If the Speaker of the House can work out a compromise which will induce the States to recognize and accept the plain, incontrovertible fact of Federal control, he will render a real service. For prolonged litigation and legislation concerning the "tidelands" can operate only to cast doubt on the validity of leases and to retard development of an important national resource. But Speaker Rayburn ought to make it an absolute premise that Federal control cannot be compromised in any way. Federal control is the key to conservation of the submerged mineral resources for the security of the Nation and the general economic welfare.

Division of the proceeds from the exploitation of these resources is another matter. Last year when the Justice, Interior and Defense Departments proposed legislation to Congress, they recommended that 37½ per cent of the receipts from oil production be returned to the adjacent States and that an additional 52½ per cent be set aside for the States benefiting under the reclamation program—in our view, a generous arrangement. In legislation proposed this year the Administration has made no specific suggestion as to division of receipts. Perhaps the Speaker can effect a compromise more satisfactory from the States' point of view. Perhaps, also, he can devise provisions more rigidly assuring the States that there will be no interference with their taxing powers or their police powers in the tideland area and that their title to inland waters and harbor developments will remain, as the Attorney General has repeatedly assured them, altogether unquestioned.

If the cries of anguish and the elaborate propaganda which have been streaming from State attorneys general have any sincerity, the States should be satisfied with compromises of this character. But the Speaker ought not to suggest, Congress ought not to sanction, and the President ought not to sign, any "compromise" which would subvert in any way the decisions of the Supreme Court as to ultimate sovereignty.

Attorney General

Senator McGrath's acceptance of the Attorney Generalship yesterday will cause a good deal of regret in Washington where he has been favorably known as one of our "mayors." His services as chairman of the Senate District Committee have met with general approval, especially his work for home rule. Local regrets over the loss of Senator McGrath from this post could be most readily overcome by the appointment of Senator Kefauver, author of the home rule bill, as his successor. In the course of drafting the home rule bill and putting it through the Senate, Mr. Kefauver acquired experience that would be invaluable to the chairman of the Senate District Committee during the difficult period while enactment of the bill is being completed and the new District Government is being established. Surely experience and special qualifications ought to modify the seniority rule when the result would be so advantageous to the Senate as well as the District.

As for Mr. McGrath's new career, he has made an excellent start by announcing that, as soon as his nomination is confirmed, he will tender his resignation as chairman of the Democratic National Committee. Such a resignation could have been taken for granted even if President Truman had not said in announcing his offer to Mr. McGrath that he did not know whether the latter would choose to be Attorney General and chief political strategist of the Democratic Party at the same time.

One other difficulty in Mr. McGrath's transfer from the legislative to the executive branch cannot be so easily overcome. The Attorney General now gets $15,000 a year and Congress is proposing to increase it to $25,000. The Constitution says that "No Senator or Representative shall, during the time for which he was elected, be appointed to any civil office under the authority of the United States, which shall have been created, or the emoluments whereof shall have been increased during such time." But there is a way out of the dilemma. In 1907 Congress increased the salary of the Secretary of State from $8000 to $12,000 just before President-elect Taft made known his intention to appoint Senator Philander Knox as Secretary of State. Congress hastened to reduce the Secretary's salary to the original figure so that the Senator could accept the office.

In the present instance, presumably Congress, which still has before it the executive pay bill passed by the House, will have to keep the Attorney General's salary at $15,000, while advancing all the other department heads to $25,000. That Senator McGrath is willing to serve the Administration in the capacity to which the President called him in spite of this disadvantage is a further tribute to his public spirit.

"Press Intimidation"

Congressman W. Kingsland Macy, the New York publisher, writes you on July 30 that Judge Samuel H. Kaufman, presiding in the Alger Hiss case, "went beyond judicial propriety and the boundaries of his court" in his remarks from the bench about the press.

Let the Congressman speak for himself, but also let him be careful not to impute a phony unanimity to the working newspapermen who reported the Hiss trial to support his vicarious impressions.

The Congressman-publisher should remember the old newspaper axiom that "many a good story is spoiled by an eyewitness." As one newsman who was in Judge Kaufman's courtroom during the six weeks of the Hiss trial, it seemed to me that freedom of the press was in no wise impaired by the judge's obiter dictum. Indeed, in his criticism of press license, the judge was, perhaps, coming closer to defense of genuine press freedom than is Congressman Macy.

11th St. "Club" Closing

Capt. Howard V. Covell of the First Precinct deserves severe censure on the basis of his action against the 11th st. "club" as reported in your issue of July 22. Every citizen should sit up and take notice that Captain Covell "was emphatic in saying that he found nothing illegal in the place" and yet proceeded to force its closing without charges, warrants, or arrests.

This is not a trivial issue for at least two reasons. First, if the captain can usurp personal power to drive out legally operating businesses and organizations then where can the line be drawn to protect American citizens against arbitrary personal use of police power? Secondly, one of the foundations of our democratic system is the principle of government by and under law and not by the personal wishes and vagaries of police officials. Yet Mr. Covell freely admits that the place was operating under law in that he found "nothing illegal," and that he personally wanted it closed as "Captain Covell said that he asked the proprietor to close and the latter refused." Mr. Covell then proceeded to hound the place by police power until the proprietor was forced to give in and to close without charges.

The news story further reveals that the captain wanted the club closed because "a number of successful downtown businessmen were members" as well as some individuals of the "sporting fraternity." It seems that the captain feels that he is official nursemaid to downtown businessmen. He should be sharply reminded that his task is that of law enforcement within the law.

"The First Locust"

Before "Cinderella Jones" (letter printed July 25) begins to correct your definitions of "katydids" in your July 19 editorial, and elaborate on the "cicada" I suggest she refresh her biology a bit. Both katydids and cicadas are heard singing during summer nights. The cicada does use a sound box while the katydid rubs vibrating portions of its legs together. However, although the cicada is often called a locust, this is a misnomer. The true locusts which ruin crops and are referred to in the Bible are members of the grasshopper family.

The common cicada, which does not resemble a grasshopper, hatches as a small larvae, digs into the ground for one year and then emerges in the summer or fall. The dried shell Cinderella Jones refers to is shed after it emerges after which its wings dry and it is ready for flight. It does not eat or do any harm during the winged stage. It mates, the female lays the eggs and then shortly dies. R. H.

Falls Church.

Cinderella Jones' sentence on 17-year locusts is a gem of scrambled entomology. The 17-year marvel is a cicada species but is reddish in color, hardly half the size of our familiar 2-year kind, and its choral song is like the whistle of telegraph wires in a strong wind. It is not one of those true locusts that form devastating swarms. Skin-shedding, also, occurs at the beginning, not at the end, of the insect's arboreal phase.

Subsidizing Royalty

Britain's cry for additional millions is manifestly preposterous. Since the economy is in such a bad way I propose the following: The elimination of a large portion of the annual bequests made by the impoverished Britons to their exalted ruler, George VI. A sizable reduction in the allotments to the various other members of the royal family wouldn't injure the cause any either.

Why should our Government reduce our Treasury by millions so as to adhere to the dying custom of royalty?

The salary paid the royal family alone would do much to alleviate the economical stress under which the British government now exists.

"Word To The Churches"

I note that in your July 26 editorial titled, "Word to the Churches," you admonish the "God-fearing peoples of the earth" to "stand together in resisting the loss of faith, the spread of terrorism, and the worship of wit and power at the expense of character and moral convictions that are characteristic of our age . . . The apostles of atheism and totalitarianism would like nothing better than to see the churches of the United States at each others' throats."

As an atheist, I take emphatic exception to such deliberate distortion of truth. My atheism stems from the speculations of such men as Democritus, Epicurus, Lucretius and Seneca of antiquity. It is deduced from the accomplishments of science and particularly from the law of permanence of matter. As a world view and a way of life it rests upon the conviction that since this is the only world of which we have any knowledge, it is incumbent upon us to arrive at a moral and ethical way of life which is best suited to cooperation, decency and peace. As an atheist, I take a categorical position against tyranny, totalitarianism in any form, and every kind of inquisition which deprives man of his heritage of freedom.

It is a specious logic which concludes that since communism has adopted atheism, we can only arrive at an understanding of atheism through a knowledge of communism.

As for the charge that the "apostles of atheism . . . would like nothing better than to see the churches of the U. S. at each others' throats," that, too, is a total misconception of the atheist position. The whole history of organized religion is one of politics, internecine struggles and open bids for power, temporal as well as spiritual. Far from glorifying in such truth, the atheist has long ago concluded that after 2000 years of Christianity, it is about time to give the scientific materialist outlook a chance.

"Welfare Department"

I thought your July 29 editorial "Welfare Department" was timely and well put. The letter in an adjacent column from the president of the American Medical Association lent some weight to your contention that a good doctor is not necessarily a good administrator. If Dr. Irons is an official spokesman for the association, this official release seems to lack the current information, consistency of content, and consideration of detail that a sound information program should include.

Paragraph 1 of his letter calls attention to the dangerous implications of the President's Reorganization Plan No. 1. This plan would give the Federal Security Agency departmental status. Presumably, "dangerous implications" means—If FSA becomes a department, its administrator will become a secretary and as such will continue to boost the health insurance plan. That's not an implication, it's a promise made before a congressional committee.

In paragraph 3, the point is made that Plan No. 1 ignores the Hoover Commission recommendation by including the health function in the Welfare Department. When queried on this point by Senator McCarthy, Mr. Herbert Hoover replied, "I do not think that the President has ignored the recommendations . . . it is necessary to set up a united medical service administration in the Government before the health functions in the Federal Security Agency can be transferred . . . creation of that agency . . . will require special legislation."

Paragraph 5 offers the opinion regarding administration already covered by The Washington Post editorial.

In paragraph 6, the Federal Security Agency is referred to as "this bureau." It is not a bureau; it is composed of more than a dozen bureaus and employs roughly 36,000 workers—more than the Department of State, Justice or Labor. Here we find at least a mild conflict in AMA reasoning. It does not want a bureau elevated to Cabinet status, but it does want a department of health. Since the Public Health Service (a part of FSA) would serve as the nucleus for any department of health, this says in effect: We should not make a department of "this bureau" but it will be all right to make a department of one component of "this bureau."

Finally, in paragraph 7, Dr. Irons concludes, "Plan No. 1 . . . does not meet the Nation's health needs . . . the only answer is prompt rejection . . ." Plan No. 1 is not a health plan. It simply recommends that the Federal Security Agency be made a department. It has the approval of no less an authority than Mr. Hoover who, in his opening statement to the Senate Committee, said:

I wish to say at once that the seven plans are all steps on the road to better organization of the administrative branch. They are, insofar as they go, substantially in accord with the recommendations of the (Hoover) Commission. OBSERVER.

Washington Calling

Clark's Nomination

IN THE WAKE of the nomination of Attorney General Tom Clark to the Supreme Court, considerable dismay is felt in the Labor-Liberal, former New Deal wing of the Democratic Party. The reaction in this important section of the Fair Deal Party is one of gloom and apprehension.

The reasons for the gloom deserve more examination than they are likely to get, since Clark's confirmation by the Senate is almost a certainty. Any controversy over the appointment will be stirred up on the conservative rather than the liberal side.

To begin with, liberals critical of the nomination put it in the framework of, first, the Truman Administration, and, second, the court itself. They believe that Chief Justice Fred Vinson had more to do than any other single individual outside the White House in influencing the choice.

They see a repetition of the pattern of government by crony. Little or no animus toward Clark enters into this judgment. It is, rather, a conviction that the horizon of the Administration is narrowing and contracting, rather than expanding.

ON THE court, Clark will be under the domination of the Chief Justice. This is where the apprehension of the liberals enters in. They see the majority of five in favor of a generous interpretation of major issues—the late Justice Frank Murphy was one of the five—converted into a minority of four.

The concern is deepest over civil rights in a period when fear and suspicion have reached a kind of fever pitch. If Clark on the court follows Vinson's lead, he will take a narrow view of the constitutional rights of the individual.

A table has been compiled for the years 1946 through 1948, showing the stand taken by each of the nine justices in civil rights cases in which the court has divided. Murphy cast his vote 53 times in support of the right claimed by the individual or individuals. This made him first in this respect among the nine, although Justice Rutledge was a close second with 52 votes for the claimed right.

On this score Chief Justice Vinson and Justice Stanley Reed were at the bottom of the list, having each voted only eight times in favor of the claimed right of the individual. Justice Harold Burton, Truman's first appointment to the court, voted 10 times for the claimed right. For the other justices the record stands: Douglas 47, Black 39, Frankfurter 23 and Jackson 14.

Viewed from the other perspective, Murphy is also at the top of the list. In only three cases did he vote to deny the claimed right of the individual. The score for the others is as follows: Rutledge 4, Douglas 10, Black 17, Frankfurter 34, Jackson 41, Burton 47, and Reed and Vinson each 49.

MANY WOULD reject such score-keeping on the ground that it ignores the legal intricacies in each and merely indicates the intellectual and emotional bent of the individual. But it does undoubtedly do the latter, and even though a man is elevated to the rarified atmosphere of the Supreme Court he does not divorce himself wholly from his past prejudices.

If Clark follows the lead of Vinson, it appears likely that a new majority of five will prevail over a new minority. The core of the minority will be Justices Black, Rutledge and Douglas, who will be joined from time to time by either Frankfurter or Jackson.

A number of highly significant civil rights cases are bound to come before the Court in the next few years. The decisions handed down in those cases will be a powerful influence in determining the future of this democracy. And they will come at a time when the power of the state is everywhere encroaching on the rights of the individual.

It would be folly to predict the course of any individual once he has been thrust up to the high level of the highest court. Expedient and opportune politicians have been transformed by the black robe. Certainly Clark's career on the Supreme Bench will be watched with the closest interest by those who hold to a belief in "equal justice under law."

Democracy Workshop

I have studied with great concern each editorial and news article published by you concerning the recent recreation difficulty here. In my considered judgment, you began with the negative premise: Democracy cannot work; therefore the Anacostia swimming pool should be opened to white youth only . . . pending that very indefinite date when . . .

The Secretary of the Interior's announced decision now makes it possible for democracy to wait until some education can be done. When will this begin? Who will start it? Some community-wide project is vitally needed now to give these kids opportunity to work or play together.

May I suggest a beginning: (1) A city-wide newsboy softball tournament, (2) such outstanding stars as Jackie Robinson, Joe Louis, Joe DiMaggio, and Bob Feller to act as sponsors; (3) participation opened to any boy who desires to play; (4) games to be held on playgrounds in every section of the city; (5) this to be a community sponsored and developed project.

Call it a democracy workshop or what you will, we must take active, immediate steps now to heal this sore in our democracy lest it become an open, eating cancer. DOVEY JOHNSON-ROUNDTREE.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

A Strange And Impossible Bill

HAD MR. Acheson brought in a bill to carry out the military aid program which he and General Bradley had described, everything would be much simpler. But the bill goes far beyond the program. It is not merely a bill to implement the Atlantic Pact and to fulfill our known and recognized commitments to certain countries outside the pact. The bill is all that. But in addition to all that it is a general license to intervene and to commit the United States all over the globe, as, when, and how the President and his appointees decide secretly that they deem it desirable to intervene.

Lippmann

It is disquieting that these extraordinary powers should have been attached as a rider to—one could fairly say as a joker in—the authorizations which are needed to carry out the declared program. It is remarkable, to say the least, that Mr. Acheson did not explain them, or even mention them, in his formal statement to the committee, and that in the State Department booklet they are referred to only obscurely and indirectly. Yet if they were enacted into law, the Congress would invest the President with unlimited power to make new commitments which Congress would have to support but could not control.

UNDER SECTION 3 of this strange bill "the President is authorized, upon the request of any nation to furnish assistance to such nation through grant, or payment in cash, or through any other means and upon such other terms as he deems appropriate, whenever he deems that the furnishing of such assistance will further the policies and the purposes of this act as set forth in Section 2."

The grandeur and magnificence of this grant of authority is spelled out in Section 13, near the end of the bill. There we learn that "the term 'nation' shall mean any foreign government or country or group thereof; or any representatives or group of the people, however constituted, designated as a 'nation' by the President for the purposes of this act."

SO UNDER THIS bill, as written, the President can arm anybody. He can arm not merely the Atlantic allies, not merely Greece and Turkey and the Philippines, not merely recognized governments, but even groups, committees, factions, individuals. He can conclude military agreements with any "representatives . . . however constituted" which he decides to designate as a "nation."

He can do all this without further consultation of Congress as and when he decides that it is in the "national interest" of the United States to arm somebody. He is the sole judge of what is the national interest of the United States. And every six months he must report to Congress "expenditures and activities authorized under this act"—but he need not report information "the disclosure of which he deems incompatible with the security of the United States."

CAN ANYONE pretend that these powers are needed for, or have anything to do with, the program for Western Europe which Mr. Acheson and General Bradley outlined? Under this bill, to be sure, that program can and would be inaugurated. But all sorts of other programs, which have not been described, could also, and most probably would, be inaugurated.

It is difficult to believe that the authors of the bill did not know this and did not intend it. That they did not hope to make the Western European military aid program, which has substantial support, the vehicle for other policies which—if they were candidly presented for debate—would not command general support.

It is not clever to be too clever and, therefore, if the avowed program of military aid is to be enacted, this bill had better be abandoned, and a new bill written which says what it means and means what it says.

The Administration ought never to have offered this bill. Had it consulted the leaders of Congress it would never have offered this bill. It could not defend this bill successfully if it were brought to debate.

INDEED, THE Administration ought not to want a bill which, because it grants such unlimited and undefined powers, would only expose the Government to unlimited and undefined pressure from every quarter of the globe. This bill is an invitation to everyone who says he is anti-Communist to apply for arms and for money. Were this bill made the law, the State Department and the Pentagon would be put in the position of having to say yes or no to requests for arms from all the countries, and from factions within them, where men are intriguing and contending for power.

Under this bill our ambassadors and our military attaches all over Asia, the Middle East, and Latin America would find themselves pressed, cajoled, and beseeched to urge Washington to supply arms or money for arms. The State Department and the Chiefs of Staff would in turn be under perpetual pressure from our missions abroad, most of them—as we know from experience—the impassioned advocates of the government, or the impassioned opponents of the government, to which they happen to be accredited.

BEFORE LONG, military aid would have become a diplomatic slush fund and a military pork barrel. As arms were doled out to governments, or their opponents, our honor and interest would be engaged. Then it would be well-nigh impossible to disengage ourselves again. For once we started arming a government or a group, we should be committed to that government or group, and we could not decently withdraw our support.

Therefore, the commitments should never be made, as they could be under this bill, casually, secretly, and without full public debate. It should be stated plainly in the law that arms will be supplied to countries named in the law, and to no one else without specific authorization from the Congress of the United States.

U. S. Should Raise Pay, Cut Prices, Nathan Says

Economist Robert R. Nathan said today that American industry can and should raise wages and cut prices at the same time.

Nathan spoke for the CIO United Steel Workers before the presidential fact-finding board, which is seeking a way out of the wage deadlock between the union and steel producers.

"Higher wages and lower prices have been the pattern of American growth and development, and it is still good business practice," Nathan said.

CYRIL JOHNSON LOOKS AT TWO FENDERS KNOCKED FROM CAR AT MELROSE CROSSING

What Meets the 'Private Eye' Often Key to Divorce Decree

While the pair were out, The Eye, husband and brother managed to establish themselves in their room: to be exact, in the bathtub, behind the shower curtain. They waited, The Eye constantly cautioning husband and brother: "When they come in, don't you breathe!"

Finally a key turned in the door. There were some preliminary maneuvers and then that stage arrived at which the pair were sitting on the edge of the bed. The conversation drifted through from the bedroom to the trio hunched and holding their breath behind the bathtub curtain.

"You don't love me," the lover was saying in hurt tones. "You love your husband."

The wife's ringing denial followed: "I have never," she affirmed, "loved that ugly jackass . . . "

It was too much for the husband. Amid the sounds of scraped porcelain and ripping curtain, he exploded from the tub, into the bedroom and headlong onto his startled spouse and her comrade.

"Almost ruined the whole case," said The Eye disapprovingly. "Fortunately, while the scuffling was going on I was able to grab up a few pieces of evidence and deposit them under my coat."

But The Eye returned to the present scene, pointing up one of the great hardships in trailing spouses who work for the Government: He has to pick them up when they get off work and this means at the height of the terrible Washington traffic snarl.

"You have to be next car behind him—and stay there. It's no good to be the second car. You might as well be in the next county."

It was quite a problem, because the bulk of his business these days seemed to be from husbands and wives seeking to nail down information on their mates' outdoor activities. In the present case, something appeared to have gone awry. It was 5:30 and the Ford had not moved. Then a trim female figure in a black mannish suit was seen walking down the roadway vaguely in our direction.

"Tramps Men Run With"

"That's the wife," the Eye said. "She's a little bit better than Mrs. Average, isn't she?"

Emphatically she was.

"It's nearly always that way . . ." The Eye was beginning to slide out the door. "The tramps men run around with when what they've got at home beats Mrs. Average all to hell . . ."

The Eye slipped to the back of the car and opened the luggage trunk as if looking for a car tool. His client the wife slowed almost indistinctly but didn't stop . . . A few whispered words passed between the pair . . . Then the Eye was back behind the driver's seat.

"The husband's left. Gone off with somebody earlier. Phoned her at home to come down and pick up the car."

He started his car.

"I've got this lady out in northwest Washington who has been entertaining a gentleman who is not her husband. Shall we be on our way?"

Lighter Moments

The business has its lighter moments, The Eye was saying as we swung out and up along Rock Creek Parkway. He had a husband and the other woman on the roof garden of a Washington hotel and he phoned the wife, his client, to come on down.

While the husband and the pretty young thing danced innocently away inside, the wife—who didn't want a divorce but only to break it up—got into her husband's car down on the street and established herself on the floor of the back seat. The Eye took up position in a park directly alongside.

Presently the husband and the young thing, locked arm in arm, emerged from the hotel. They got in the car—and promptly clinched.

From the back seat the woman shot up like a springing panther, her fangs grabbing for the woman. Huband and woman exploded from opposite sides of the car onto the street, the woman tearing like a 100-yard-dash specialist into the night and down Pennsylvania ave., the wife hot in pursuit.

Eye Couldn't Do a Thing

"I couldn't do a thing," The Eye said. "I was laughing so hard I had to lie down in the grass and hold my stomach."

But we had arrived at tonight's target.

Private detectives have a fondness for slopes, which improve the vantage point. We managed to find another one from which to observe the right-side, second-floor apartment and although we must have been a healthy 150 feet away, we could see headlong into the living room.

Twilight was just beginning to settle over that lovely residential section that is northwest Washington, swallowing up in darkness the yellow-brick form of the apartment house.

So much the better. For presently the lights came on in the living room and all was like a stage. The small audience—two spectators—awaited the play. We saw a shapely young form moving about the room as if straightening things in preparation for a visitor.

Windows Stay Unshuttered.

"You watch," said The Eye. "Those windows will stay unshuttered even when the corespondent enters. People are so innocent. They haven't the slightest idea. When the corespondent enters . . . and he will enter . . ."

The Eye had just started on this case. The husband had reason to believe his wife was extensively entertaining the man, a considerable description of whom he had supplied. The husband wanted the actual evidence for several reasons: to get a divorce, to help himself out alimony-wise, to get custody of his child, to get grounds for a suit against the corespondent.

"If I can just see him go in that apartment tonight and stay for a few hours, I am on my way to break this case," The Eye said ominously. "If I can just see him do that . . ."

As we waited in the gathering darkness and watched the young wife in the living-room, The Eye talked of his strange profession. Much of it is entirely outside the law.

Breaking Doors Illegal

When The Eye breaks down a door, as he has done more times than he can remember, he does so in absolute violation of the law. He depends for his protection on his certainty about the evidence behind that door, and it being what it is, that the people there are not going to sue anybody.

This is precisely why it is so important, before crashing, to be sure of his ground from many nights of observation.

"Once I got in the wrong door," The Eye said. "I'd tailed a woman and another man down 21 miles from Fredericksburg into a cabin. I went back to town, phoned the husband in Washington and two other men to help me. They came on down and about daybreak out we all went to the cabins.

"The car was parked by this one cabin—so naturally I supposed that must be it. In we went, crumpling the door. Damn! It was the wrong couple. "Didn't matter though," The Eye brushed this off as a minor error. "They were cheating anyhow."

Found in Next Cabin

"We rushed out, ran down the porch and smashed in the door of the next cabin. There they were—just the same way they came into the world."

There is a good reason for having the client spouse along, as in this case.

"If I don't, the wife will tell her husband, 'Why, Darling, that detective is lying through his teeth.' And the husband, the chances are, will believe her like a fool. So I don't take the responsibility. I bring the spouse along and let them see the gruesome evidence themselves."

It is a considerable scene always, and sometimes a violent one, that follows on the confrontation. On one trailing, The Eye had his client, a woman this time, with him. When they crashed, the wife's eyes bulged like a mad woman's as she looked at the turbulent, disengaging scene.

Wife Attacks With Shoe

But with a scream and a plunge the wife had swept up her rival's own high-heeled shoe from the floor and borne down on her. Meantime the husband, throwing on only his shirt, had fled into the hall, where he stood quivering in terror—and the belief that his wife was murdering his mistress inside.

"And she might have done it," said The Eye. "I almost had to break my client's arm to get her away. And, what do you think? Later she accused me of double-crossing her because I wouldn't let her kill the woman."

The Eye, by the way, is a storehouse of Washington addresses, hotels, apartments, where he has gathered many a bit of evidence that has led to divorce in the District. Once the evidentiary scene was the steps of a great temple of a fraternal order here, the time 4 o'clock in the morning.

The Private Eye does not always operate from a parked car. Sometimes he does inside jobs. A client wanted evidence on the visits of her husband, a Washington business man, with a young woman who lived in a boarding house on Vermont ave.

Eye Takes Meals There

The Eye arranged to take his meals at the boarding house. He soon discovered his client's husband was in the habit of visiting his love of late-evening hours in the parlor. The Eye spotted his weapon: a piano in the corner

Seven nights he sat hunched behind the piano, listening. For The Eye is sometimes The Ear, as well. He gathered a ton of auditory evidence, and the woman got her divorce and an amount of consoling money with it.

On another case, The Eye took up quarters in a rooming house near the Capitol to collect the facts for a husband about his wife, separated from him and living there. He fronted by telling the landlady he was doing research at the Library of Congress for a steamship company.

The case involved weeks of careful preparation ingratiating himself with all and sundry in the house, among them the defendant's woman friend—a homely creature for whom he was obliged to make a considerable play, including trips out to see her family.

Sacrifice Pays Off

All this self-sacrifice paid off hugely. The husband's suspicion that the wife was carrying on with a guard at the Library of Congress was verified. The matter had its climax one moonless night when The Eye caught the pair in the back seat of an automobile.

The voice of The Eye paused abruptly. A car had pulled up in front of the apartment house. The Eye, with an almost invisible movement even in the car, pulled a slip of paper from his pocket.

"Forty-seven Chevrolet, maroon . . ."

It was a maroon '47 chevvy all right. A man stepped out.

"There," said The Eye with quiet satisfaction, though no gloating, "goes the corespondent."

We saw him enter the house, go upstairs. We saw the shapely figure of a wife, but not this man's, trip happily and innocently across the living room. In a moment we saw the two figures come together. The Eye sighed and looked at his watch. It was 9:23 p. m.

"Simple as stealing candy from a baby," he said, settling back. "All we have to do now is wait."

Tomorrow: Mr. Brinkley, in tow of The Eye, tries for five hours, but sees nothing very much. However, he hears quite a bit.

TRUIE V. SIVILS

Driver Unhurt As Train Hits Stalled Car

Paralyzed with fear, the driver of a car stalled on Melrose railroad crossing, Hyattsville, yesterday froze to the driving wheel as a passenger train roared down on him at 65 to 70 miles an hour.

Seconds later, Truie V. Sivils, 54-year-old building foreman, crawled from his auto on trembling legs—uninjured. The train had sliced off the car's front bumper, radiator, hood and front fenders, but left him unharmed.

According to Hyattsville Police Pvt. Elmer Thompson, this is what happened:

About 4:40 p. m. Sivil, who lives at 5600 Bock rd., Oxon Hill, turned his '47 Chevrolet onto Rhode Island ave. at Melrose crossing to cut through to Bladensburg rd.

Riding with him were Clarence Addison, 56, 9 Myrtle st. ne.; Washington Armstrong, 65, 73 Myrtle st. ne.; and Levi McKey, 29, 608 Acker st. ne., all laborers.

Traffic was heavy.

As Sivils moved up to the tracks, he suddenly was forced to slam on his brakes. This caused the motor to stop. At that moment the train's warning bell began to clang, and the wooden crossing gate fell across the car.

The three passengers hopped out, tried to push the car back. The car was in forward gear, however. Sivils couldn't get it out. Unable to budge the car, the three men raced off to safety. Sivils, who later said he could both hear and see the train, sat glued in his seat.

"I was never so scared in my life," he said last night. The train approached, struck, and was past in short seconds. It came to a halt two miles down the line toward Washington.

Sivils blamed it all on congested Bladensburg rd. That busy highway, he said, had caused cars to be backed up all the way to Rhode Island ave.

"I definitely think the county authorities ought to get the traffic moving," he declared.

Excavation Engineers May Strike

The AFL operating engineers will go on strike against the area's construction excavators at 7:30 a. m. on Thursday unless an agreement is reached before then on wages and a health and welfare fund, union officials announced yesterday.

No negotiation meetings were scheduled before the strike date up to last night. While an excavators' spokesman said there might be a meeting on Wednesday or Thursday, a union official said one tentatively planned for Wednesday afternoon had been called off because employer representatives said they could not meet then.

Members of the union, Local 77, International Union of Operating Engineers, who number about 450, authorized their wage policy committee on Saturday to set the date for a strike at their discretion, and the officials acted yesterday.

A strike of the operating engineers, who operate all stationary engines such as bulldozers, cranes, shovels and derricks, would quickly tie up construction projects in the excavating stage, as well as others if it continues.

The operating engineers have been asking for an increase of 25 cents an hour over the present $1.50 to $2.50 an hour scale, as well as a health and welfare fund. They rejected a 10-cent raise offer from representatives of the excavators and the Master Builders Association on Saturday.

Smallest Lamb Crop Reported Since 1924

The Agriculture Department reported yesterday that this year's lamb crop was the smallest since it started keeping records in 1924.

The crop was reported at 18,906,000head. That was about one million, or 6 per cent, smaller than last year. The crop also was about 10 million head or 35 per cent smaller than the 1938-47 average.

D.C. Gas Firm's Net Slumps to $1.19 a Share

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington Gas Light Co. and subsidiaries yesterday reported consolidated net income of $727,710 or $1.19 a common share, compared with $1,536,546 or $3.01 a share in the previous 12 months.

The earnings failed to cover the $1.50 a share annual dividend paid for some years.

The sharp decline in the interim statement was attributed to increased operating costs. On July 14 the gas company applied to the District Public Utilities Commission for higher rates in the city, calculated to produce additional gross revenues of about $900,000 a year.

Operating revenues for the 12-month period totaled $18,420,210, an increase of $441,096 over the previous 12 months. This was more than offset, however, by an upturn of $1,310,945 in operatig expenses. Biggest cost increases were experienced in maintenance, up $500,000; operations, up $400,000, and depreciation, up $280,000.

The per share earnings were figured on the basis of 612,000 common shares outstanding at the end of June, as compared with 510,000 shares at the end of June, 1948.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Aug. 1 (AP).—Lard ran ahead for fair-sized gains while the rest of the market loafed on the Board of Trade today. Except for the activity in lard, it was one of the dullest sessions in several weeks.

Soybeans showed some strength at one time, largely on buying by local traders. Gains ranged to more than 3 cents. When these contracts approached their seasonal highs made last week, however, they quickly backed down.

Wheat closed ⅛ to ½ lower, corn was unchanged to ⅛ higher, oats were ⅛ lower to ¾ higher, rye was ¼ lower to ¾ higher; soybeans were ¾ to 1⅛ higher, and lard was 20 to 43 cents a hundred puonds higher.

Texas Bank Account Eyed

in this connection shows that Maragon said he once took two men to the New York office of the War Assets Administration to help them buy $30,000 worth of surplus machinery. He said he wasn't paid for it.

Senator Mundt's bill would require anyone who assists firms to get Government contracts for pay "or any other consideration" to register with Congress. "Regular" representatives of firms seeking Government business would be exempt.

Registrants would have to make full quarterly reports somewhat approximating those now filed by lobbyists. Violations would be punished by up to a year in jail and a fine of $5000. The Mundt bill also would set up a central office of contract information to help small businessmen obtain data on forthcoming Government orders.

Federal officials or clerks who leaked such data would be fired and could be sent to jail for a year and fined $1000.

At his impromptu press conference, Maragon also charged that some members of a 1946 American mission to Greece—which was headed by Grady—were guilty of "disgraceful" conduct. He said they engaged in "orgies" of heavy drinking, and mingled with Communists.

Ambassador Grady, now in this country in connection with the arms assistance program, told reporters he had "no idea what Maragon was driving at" in his demand for an investigation of Dollar Steamship Lines or talk of drunkenness in Greece.

Grady became president of the new American President Line when the Dollar Line was reorganized in 1941 by the United States Maritime Commission. Killion succeeded him in the post in 1947 when Grady was named Ambassador to India.

Declaring he had "no desire" to get involved in a dispute with Maragon, Grady suggested the latter was "just striking out wildly" in an attempt to distract attention from himself.

The Malta native who once had a White House pass and still calls Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, military aide to President Truman, his "good friend," denied a host of statements published about him.

He said he has no connection with any "one per centers, five per cents, 50 per centers or million per centers."

He said he never had a photograph showing President Truman and himself in a friendly pose.

His $6200-a-year-job with the 1946 mission to Greece was obtained in the regular way and not with General Vaughan's help.

Maragon also denied he'd once been turned down for the job and had been fired from it. But he did say he'd probably made a "nuisance" of himself by reporting the "heavy drinking" to Grady.

The latter said Maragon never talked to him about the drinking, and doubted if he would have discussed it with him. Ambassador Grady's version of his departure differed with his on another point.

"He went home right after I told him to," said Grady. "I'd call that firing, wouldn't you?"

Another published statement denied by Maragon was that President Truman had taken him to the Potsdam Conference. He said he hadn't been there.

Hunt's Failure to Get $25,000 Fee Reported

NYHT News Service

James V. Hunt tried and failed early this year to induce a group of uniform manufacturers to sign a contract under which he sought a $25,000 fee to get the Army quartermaster general to rescind an important order affecting the purchase of officers' uniforms, it was learned yesterday.

The "deal" fell through when officials of a trade association representing the manufacturers refused to agree to pay such a fee to Hunt.

The order, which has since been temporarily held up pending an investigation by a House Armed Services Subcommittee, threatened to run the affected uniform manufacturers out of business.

Its intent was to have the quartermaster general procure officers' uniforms and then resell them to officers at cost. It would thus have ended the system under which Army officers have bought their own uniforms directly from retailers or tailors.

The order was issued by Maj. Gen. Herman Feldman, who was suspended as quartermaster general by the Army July 16 pending investigation of charges that he provided information to a contractor's representative — presumably Colonel Hunt — "under circumstances which appear irregular."

The story of Colonel Hunt's offer to try to get General Feldman's order rescinded for a $25,000 fee was confirmed yesterday by Stanley J. Cummings, executive secretary of the National Association of Uniform Manufacturers, Inc.

Crook Does Okay, Too

Decatur, Ill., Aug. 1 (AP).—Prince Marko said "Hocus-pocus" and a man's watch and billfold disappeared.

"Gingerocus," and it was back.

The audience at an amusement park last night went away amazed. And the magician returned to his dressing room.

He found his billfold containing $40 had been stolen from the clothes he had left there.

State Allows Road Grant

The State of Virginia has approved a grant of $21,465.90 for maintenance of roads in Falls Church, City Manager Roy F. Dunn announced yesterday.

A total of nearly 12 miles of streets, including 4.88 miles of primary road and 7.153 miles of secondary roads has passed State requirements for aid, Dunn said.

The State contributes a standard $4000 a mile for primary roads and $300 a mile for secondary roads which qualify for aid.

Bids to Open Aug. 16 For Fairfax Highway

Richmond, Va., Aug. 1 (AP).—The State highway department today called for bids to be opened August 16 for two miles of concrete pavement construction on the Henry G. Shirley Memorial Highway in Fairfax County. The work will be on the northbound lane, beginning four miles south of Route 236.

The project will complete the northern ten-mile stretch of the highway. Still to be put under contract are seven miles of the northbound lane on the southern end of the project.

Retail Sales Level Seen 4% Below 1948

New York, Aug. 1 (AP).—The magazine Sales Management estimated today that the current dollar level of retail sales is running about 4 per cent below 1948.

New England and California, the trade publication found, lagged furthest behind the Nation in retail and general business activity. Also in this category were New York, Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Tennessee, Florida, Georgia and South Carolina.

Sales Management predicted that the dollar volume of retail sales in August would total $10,621,000,000, a slight increase over the July estimate.

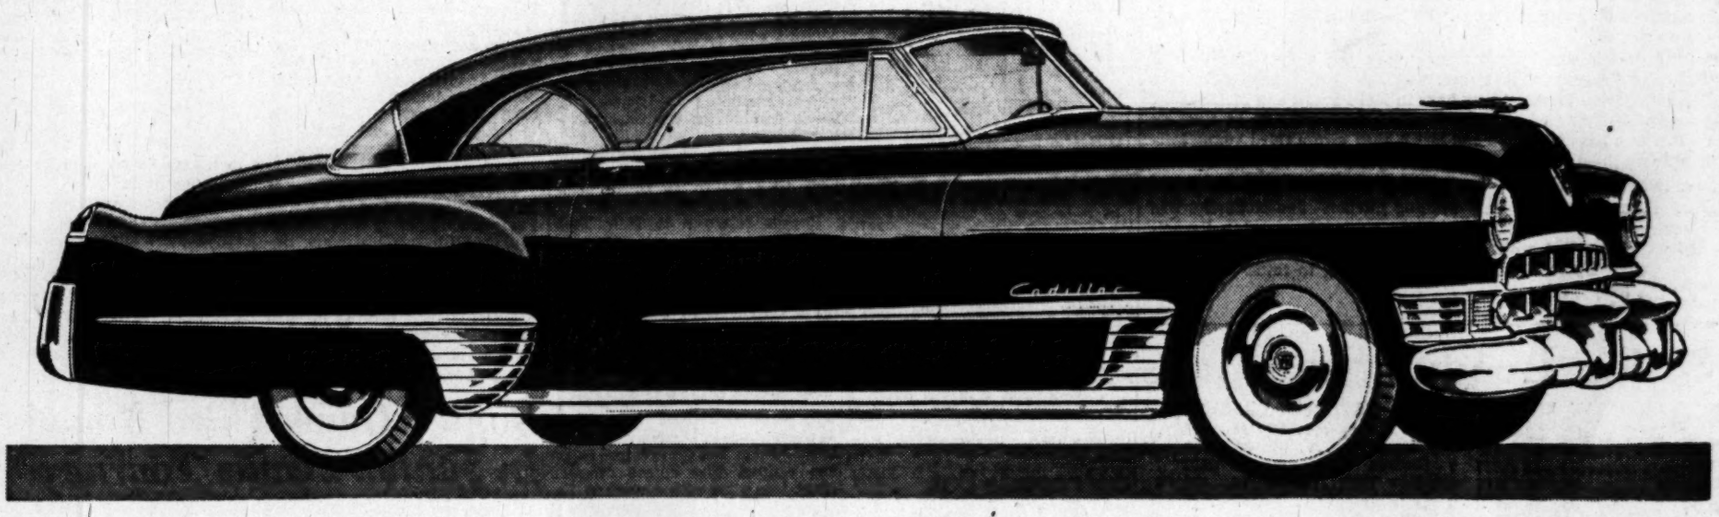
Presenting the New

Cadillac Coupe de Ville



ILLUSTRATED above is the Coupe de Ville—an ultra smart new Cadillac body type, designed for those who seek the low-swept lines and open-airiness of a convertible—combined with the comfort, convenience and safety of a closed car.

It is a classic example of modernity and practicality—one of the most desirable and most useful models ever to issue from the boards of Cadillac designers.

Yet—smart and beautiful as it is—the Coupe de Ville's greatest superiority lies in the chassis on which it is built. For, like all Cadillacs, the core of its goodness is found in its performance—in the wonderful capacity of its new V-type engine; in the soft, even, restful manner in which it rolls over the highway; in the easy, effortless response to steering wheel and brakes. It is, truly, a symphony in motion.

We should be pleased indeed to give you full details about this wonderful new body type—as well as the other beautiful models which grace our showroom. Why not come in today?

Bosox Nose Out Cleveland Again, 4-3

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

EARLY IN THE 1946 season, the Red Sox unveiled a tall, spidery rookie left hander named Maurice McDermott in a game with the Yankees. The kid had a fast ball, but it was untamed. He struck out eight Yanks, but he walked too many. The Red Sox shipped him off to their Scranton, Pa., farm club.

Among his strikeout victims was Charley Keller, who twice went down on strikes when McDermott did get his pitches over the plate. Thus it was that Keller was interested when the Red Sox announced McDermott was being shipped back to the minors.

POVICH

"He a year or two away from the big leagues," said Boston Manager Joe McCarthy to his old pupil, Keller, after the game.

"I hope he's 10 years away," said Keller. "I don't want to see any more of him. I wouldn't bat .150 against that kid. He throws more stuff at you than the Newhouses, Fellers and the other good pitchers in this league. If he ever gets control, I hope I'm not around."

McDERMOTT IS BACK, as the box scores have been noting in sensational fashion lately. His most recent effort was that five-hit, 3-0 shutout against Cleveland the other day when the Red Sox desperately needed a victory to stay in the pennant race. He's the happiest thing to hit the Boston club since Owner Tom Yawkey came up with an outfielder named Ted Williams, from Minneapolis before the war.

He isn't the best pitcher in the majors yet, but McDermott qualifies for one superlative. He's the skinniest. His 170 pounds are spread over a 6-foot-3 frame and he could double for Ichabod Crane. That speed of his is strictly leverage, chum, plus the most palpable wrist-snap this side of Ewell Blackwell, the Cincinnati Reds' contortionist pitcher.

He's back in the majors all right, and lucky it is for the Red Sox, because since they promoted him to a starting pitcher, he has won five games, lost only two, and one of those defeats was a 1-0 heartbreaker. He's one of the reasons, and an important one, why the Red Sox still have pennant ideas.

THE BROOKLYN DODGERS would be boasting of McDermott if their scouts had been more alert. He was one of the kids who answered a call to the Dodgers' baseball school at Ebbets Field in 1945, and they let him get away. The Red Sox signed him as a 16-year-old and inducted him into their farm system. The Red Sox weren't impressed sufficiently to invite him to their training camp at the outset of 1948.

Only when their pitching situation began to look desperate before they broke camp did the Sox call McDermott over from the Louisville farm club training site. They liked his possibilities, but deduced he needed more seasoning, so Scranton got him. At Scranton, the figures told an interesting story. McDermott had a remarkable earned run average of 2.07 in that league, but could win only three games while losing six.

But when McDermott wasn't walking batters he was striking 'em out mostly. He averaged 12 strikeouts per game at Scranton, and still couldn't win.

Joe McCarthy took a dim view of such utter wildness and didn't even call him to the Red Sox training camp this year. The best promotion the Red Sox gave him was to Louisville.

THEY COULDN'T ignore McDermott, though, when their own pitching started to go sour this year and he was winning at Louisville. A couple of months ago, they called him up to the parent club. His five wins against two defeats have been no accident. He has allowed an average of only five hits per game since joining the Red Sox. And his wildness has been tamed to the point that he has walked only five per game. He has been striking out an average of six.

McDermott's smart performances may put a new face on the American League pennant race. The Red Sox, bogged down for years by ragged pitching, now have in Mel Parnell and McDermott, the cleverest pair of southpaws in the league. And in Charley Stobbs, who has also won 5 and lost 2, they own a third young lefthander destined for a high place among the league's pitchers.

A month ago, the Red Sox pennant ambitions appeared hopeless. Parnell was their only winning pitcher. Joe McCarthy was never sure where his next victory was coming from unless Parnell was working. But with McDermott handy he has a new high expectancy. Up in Boston, they're beginning to think again that they can take it all.

Dodgers Win, 9-0; Cardinals Lose, 8-1

Spahn's Hurling, Sauer Homer Stops Red Birds

St. Louis, Aug. 1 (AP).—Lefthander Warren Spahn pitched the Boston Braves to an 8-1 victory over St. Louis tonight that shaved the league-leading Cardinals' margin over Brooklyn to half a game. Ed Sauer slammed a three-run homer, and Bob Elliott hit one good for two runs.

Striking out four and walking only one, Spahn coasted to his 13th victory against eight defeats. He gave up eight hits, including a home run by Enos Slaughter to the right-field pavilion in the fourth.

The three-run homer by Sauer, an ex-Cardinal, went into the left field bleachers and was his second of the year. He scored behind Elbie Fletcher and Elliott who had singled.

In the first inning, just after Alvin Dark walked, the park lights went out for several seconds. Elliott was the next man up after the lights came on again and blasted his homer to the left field scoreboard, crossing home behind Dark. It was No. 12 for Elliott.

Brooklyn Cuts St. Louis Lead To Half Game

Pittsburgh, Aug. 1 (AP).—Brooklyn kept hot on the heels of the St. Louis Cardinals in the torrid National League race tonight by waltzing to a 9-0 win over Pittsburgh before a crowd of 29,488.

The Dodgers batted around in the first inning for six runs to take the pressure off big Ralph Branca who allowed only four hits as he won his 12th game against three defeats.

Branca was in great form and his mates supported hi mwith a 11-hit attack, including homers by Pee Wee Reese, Duke Snider and Gil Hodges.

Reese Homers

The star Brooklyn hurler retired 16 consecutive men from the third inning to the ninth when Ralph Kiner tagged him for a double after one man was out. Kiner, who had been in a batting slump, also got two singles to account for three of Pittsburgh's hits.

Big Ernie Bonham, trying for his sixth consecutive win, was batted from the box in the first without getting a man out. Reese greeted him with a homer and apparently upset the former Yankee pitcher.

Giants Rout Cubs, 11 to 3

Chicago, Aug. 1 (AP). — Bobby Thomson backed up Clint Hartung's effective six-hit pitching today with a triple, two doubles and a single in New York's 11—3 romp over the last-place Chicago Cubs.

Hartung, knocked from the box in six straight starts, went the route for the first time since June 28 in a loosely played game. Four errors by the Cubs and 14 Giant hits contributed to the rout.

Hank Sauer's 22d homer broke Hartung's shutout in the sixth. It was the second Cub hit. They bunched Gene Mauch's double, Hal Jeffcoat's triple and a long fly for the other two in the eighth.

Ortiz Signs For Cooper

Manuel Ortiz, world bantam-for a 10-round nontitle bout at Griffith Stadium, Monday night, champion, were signed yesterday Cooper, District featherweight weight champion, and Jimmy August 15.

Johnny Rogers, who recently took over as manager of the champion, signed on behalf of Ortiz, who continues his training at his home town of El Centro, Calif.

Cooper took time off from his training to appear for the contract signing ceremony. He was accompanied by his manager, Billy Banks.

The contract, whose terms were not disclosed, calls for a fat guarantee for Ortiz. In 1942, he won the 118-pound title with a 12-round decision over Lou Salica.

Stipulated in the contract is Rogers' insistence that Cooper weigh between 118 and 123 pounds, which, according to Banks, will be no trouble for the flashy District boxer.

Ortiz will train in California until five days before the bout here then fly to D. C. to complete his workouts.

Rogers returned to New York after the signing yesterday to confer with Madison Square Garden officials about a bout for Ortiz before the pair sail in September for a campaign in England.

Bell, Former 'Skin Rooter, Now Candidate for Team

By BRIAN BELL, JR.

Los Angeles, Aug. 1.—This is written by a guy who knows he's on the spot. Since 1939 my family has lived in Washington. I've gone to school there and played sports there. Now I'm on the West Coast with the Redskins and a chance to play for them this fall. That makes me both proud and a little bit scared.

When I was going to junior high and Western High School the Redskins were the big thing. Every boy could tell you last week's score, what the Redskins needed most, what position they held in the league standings. We used to sit around and talk about the team and when we could get tickets we were at the park.

Now, only a few years later it hardly seems possible to me that I'm at training camp with Sammy Baugh, Wilbur Moore, Turk Edwards, John Adams and others I've watched so many times from the grandstand.

The Redskins drafted me two years ago when I was a junior at Washington and Lee and that was the first idea I had that there might be a chance for me with the club. After graduation I was approached by another pro football team and also had a chance to go into pro baseball.

I guess every boy wants an opportunity before the hometown fans and I'm no different.

Of course I realize that just a name on a piece of paper saying you're the property of the Redskins doesn't mean you've made the ball club. The Skins have a lot of good backs and I'm just one of many until I prove myself.

This doesn't mean I don't have confidence. I've played the T for the last five years in college and in the service and they're going to try me at my favorite spot—right halfback.

One of the veterans told me "remember you're as good as anybody." I intend remembering that.

Bogley Gains Third Round In Junior Tennis Tourney

Kalamazoo, Mich., Aug. 1—Gilbert Bogley of Chevy Chase, Md., king of the nation's junior players, opened defense of his crown today as the largest field in the history of the National Junior and Boys' Tennis championships started play on the courts of Kalamazoo College.

The black-haired young champion drew a bye in the first round, then raced through Milledge Galphin of Louisville, Ky., 6-0, 6-1, to gain the third round.

Ted Rogers, the Chevy Chase youngster who pust graduated to the junior age division, won two matches to follow Bogley into the third round. In the initial match, Ted rallied from a first set deficit to win 4—6, 6—0, 6—3 from Harry Corson of Nashville, and then, late in the afternoon, walloped a strong John Sahratian of Detroit 6—0, 6—4.

Tim Coss of Washington, also in his first season out of boys' ranks, fell victim to Julian Oates of Waco, Texas, in the first round, 6—1, 7—5.

Tom Bradford of Washington, also playing in the boys' division, drew a first-round bye. Tomorrow he will play Irving Pielet of Hinsdale, Ill.

Until rain interrupted the matches late in the day, most of the seeded junior favorites had followed Bogley into the third round.

Tomorrow Gogley meets Robert Roediger of El Paso, Texas, in the third round while Rogers faces Jimmy Farrell, the Kalamazoo youth who is seeded twelfth.

Browns Win Series

Drews Drops 2-0 Noose on Nats Necks

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

That extensive one-game winning streak of the Nats is no more.

In its place, is a losing streak of the same proportion, applied by the St. Louis Browns generally and Pitcher Karl Drews particularly.

Drew hurled the Browns to a nifty 2-0 victory last night, thus enabling the tail-enders to capture the series, three games to one, from their neighbors, the seventh place Nats.

It was quite a triumph for the beanpole former Yankee righthander. It marked the first time since May 11 that he had started, finished and won a game all in the same evening.

Last night, however, he didn't have too much trouble. He allowed eight hits and only once did the Nats get a runner to third base.

Tough on Scarborough

Ray Scarborough yielded 10 hits, but didn't pitch too badly.

The Brownies scored once in the fourth inning and again in the ninth and that was all the runs the 3437 customers got for their dough.

A single by Gerry Priddy, Dick Kokos' fly to Gil Coan and a single by Catcher Sherman Lollar added up to the first Browns run. That proved to be enough, but they clubbed Scarborough for three more singles in the ninth to manufacture their other tally.

That last run, incidentally, produced one of the strangest double plays of this or any other season. With Brownies on first and second and only one away, Bob Dillinger slapped his third single to score Ed Pellagrini from second.

Dillinger Takes a Nap

Ed Stewart's relay got away from Eddie Robinson and Jake Early, but Scarborough backed up the play and rifled to Robinson, who tagged Drews who was trying to score.

Dillinger, meanwhile, thinking Drews' out was the third out, simply walked off third base to pick up his glove and Robinson fired to Eddie Yost who tagged Dillinger to complete the bizarre double play.

IN SHORT—Dillinger got three for four to recapture the American League batting lead, raising his average five points to .349 . . . Eddie Robinson, who had hit safely in six straight games, was stopped cold, but Stewart carried his string to seven with a single off Priddy's glove in the third . . . Dick Kokos ran into Jake Early's mitt sliding into the plate in the sixth inning and suffered a cut lip. He was replaced by Stan Spence in the seventh . . . After whipping the Browns 10 straight times, the Nats have now lost six out of their last eight games with the Missiourians . . . Outfielder Roberto Ortiz is due in today. He arrived last Friday but returned to Havana the same night. He had to present immigration officials with a copy of his Nats contract before they'd issue him a visa . . . It's Cleveland tonight for the first of a three-game series . . . Mickey Harris, still seeking his first win as a Nat, meets Early Wynn, who needs no introduction locally. . .

Williams' Hit Drives in Winning Run

Boston, Aug. 1 (AP).—Boston's Red Sox today turned back the Cleveland Indians, 4-3, as Lefthander Mel Parnell pitched his 15th victory before a surprising Monday turnout of 35,248 paid fans.

The victory gave the Sox a 3-2 edge in the five-game series, which attracted a total of 134,131 fans.

By winning, the third-place Sox selected by many as winter book pennant favorites, moved within 2½ games of the second-place Indians. They now trail the leading New York Yankees by seven games.

Ted Williams punched a short single into center field in the seventh inning to drive in Dom Dimaggio with what proved to be the winning run.

28th in Row For DiMag

Dimaggio began the winning rally by lining a two-out safety over Second Baseman Joe Gordon's head. Dom raced to third on the hit-and-run when Johnny Pesky hit to virtually the same spot.

DiMag had two hits, keeping his consecutive games hitting streak alive through 28 games—half as many as Brother Joe recorded for a major league mark.

The Sox trailed 3-0 going into the fourth when they scored once. They added two in the fifth before winning in the seventh.

Jim Hegan started the Indians toward their first two runs by opening the third with a sharp ground single into left. Dale Mitchell lined a safety over short. Lou Boudreau dropped a Texas leaguer into center and Hegan scored. Dimaggio's throw to the plate was wide for an error as the base runners advanced. Joe Gordon drew an intentional pass and Mitchell scored as Larry Doby forced Gordon.

Hegan's Sixth Homer

Hegan's sixth homer of the season in the next inning ended the scoring.

Vern Stephens got the first Boston hit off Lemon, who lost his sixth against 12 victories, when he doubled into the left field corner in the fourth. Junior then raced home when Bobby Doerr followed with a ground safety into center.

Al Zarilla began Boston's fifth with a scratch single to Short. He was forced by Birdie Tebbetts who went to second when Parnell lashed a solid safety into right.

DiMaggio doubled off the wall in left for one run and Johnny Pesky singled to right scoring Parnell. DiMag was strapped off third and run down.

Farm System Almost Ready to Pay Off

Gosh, Just Wait for Great Young Nats in '51

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

IN BROOKLYN they used to say, "Wait until next year."

At Griffith Stadium they're asking you to be just a bit more patient. "Wait until 1951."

That's the year the Nat bosses hope—hope, not promise—they'll be able to afford Washington's long suffering baseball fans some measure of relief.

Trickling into Griffith Stadium two years hence will be the first real products of the Nats' farm system, which will be all of four years old by then.

You'll probably see a full-blooded Indian and a Washington hacker turned hurler on the pitching staff; a 17-year-old Cuban "who's the best in the minors" doing the catching, and an infielder "who should hit a ton."

These and many other future wondrous Nats are now sizzling like the weather in Washington's baseball incubators at Concord, N. C., Emporia, Va., Havana, Charlotte, Orlando, Hagerstown and Chattanooga.

Disgusted over past failures, shocked over the present one and skeptical even now over next season, President Griffith was eager to leap into a discussion of the future, brushing off the 1949 season as quickly as he was permitted.

"I thought and still think we have a good ball team. I just don't know how to explain what's happened to us. Our pitching collapsed for one thing. That's obvious, but those boys we've got can pitch better than they're doing.

"I'm not blaming Joe Kuhel for anything. It hasn't been his fault. Joe's done a fine job. He's gonna make us a real good manager."

Griffith would not elaborate on the statement, but it was the first indication that Kuhel will probably be retained next year.

The 79-year-old Washington boss admitted that the Nats were years behind the baseball times in their farm operations. He believes, however, that Ossie Bluege, his farm director, has made real strides in the two years that he's been in charge of the program to breed ballplayers for the Nats.

With no fanfare and no trumpets sounding off at the signing of each "second Walter Johnson or Ty Cobb," the Nats have already spent over $400,000 in building up their farm system.

This includes salaries and expenses of 14 scouts, bonuses for signing players, players salaries and improvements to parks where the young hopefuls are playing.

Strung out at seven farm clubs from Chattanooga, Tenn. to Havana, Cuba, are 152 players whom the Nats control. In addition there are working agreements with three other teams with the Nats having first crack at one or all of their outstanding players.

Of the 152 players, Griffith and Bluege have labeled 35 as "sure-fire, can't miss, greatest I've seen, etc."

Their best bets appear to be Jimmy Pearce, 24-year-old righthander purchased last year from the Chicago Cubs, and Diz Sutherland, lefthander who drove a cab in Washington last year.

Both are with the Charlotte Class B team. Pearce, who stands 6-feet-6-inches and weighs 190, has broken even in 14 decisions with a last place club, but a further examination of his record reveals he's quite a stickout. He's allowed only 102 hits in 122 innings and has fanned 75, 19 more than he's walked.

Sutherland, also 24, has an 11-10 record with the Charlotte Club that's won only 39 games. He's fanned 108 in 155 innings and has yielded only 74 walks.

Down on the Class D Emporia, Va., team is Griff's pride and joy, 19-year-old Melvin Doxtator, a full-blooded Indian pried away from the Shawano, Wisc., reservation. He's a strapping fellow, much on the lines of Dick Weik, and a "can't miss" cinch, according to scouts. The Nats seem to be more smitten over his ancestry than his ability because they have no record on his progress.

The high echelon is also high on Hal Keller, 22-year-old brother of the Yankees' Charlie. Shifted to the outfield from behind the plate, Keller has already batted in 70 runs in compiling a .320 average for Hagerstown.

Dee Stafford, 19-year-old first baseman, is hitting .280 for Charlotte and "should hit a ton," according to scouts. Pride of the catching prospects is Orlando Echevarria, 17-year-old Cuban. "Best minor league catching prospect I ever saw," said Griff.

Most of the leading prospects will be at Chattanooga, a double A farm next year. Then, in good ole 1951, they'll be at Griffith Stadium. Just be patient.

On Artificial Lures

Watoga Lake Bass Biting, Smith Finds

OUR LOCAL fresh water fishermen have really taken it on the chin as far as fishing conditions are concerned.

Murdock

While the eastern section of the country has suffered from dry spells, heavy downpours in the neighboring states of Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia have put bass fishing on a minus basis. Streams which overran their banks and muddy waters have kept these anglers on the sidelines.

But here are a few exceptions. Otis Smith reports that bass fishing in Watoga Lake is unusually good. With a friend from Clarksburg, they took 24 bass while spending a three-day weekend at the park. Again on a single day trip, they caught six more of these gamesters, making a total of 30 bass for four days. Using artificial lures, they fished not more than three hours at any one time. The smallest bass landed was a 12-incher.

We have just received a report of a large brook trout caught in Pass Run, measuring 23 inches and weighing just an ounce less than five pounds.

The whopper was hauled in by Melvin Schick, an appliance salesman for the Northern Virginia Power Co., who grew restless while waiting for the Shenandoah River to clear enough for bass fishing. So he headed for the Skyline Drive, with its clear, cold trout streams. The move proved a successful one for Mr. Schick, but a tragic ending for Mr. Trout.

W. K. RYAN and a party of District anglers enjoyed excellent angling luck at Nag's Head by boating 26 amberjack, one weighing 25 pounds and a batch of blues and dolphin.

Paul Kren and Helen Hill of Washington, D. C., and Col. and Mrs. Chamberlain and Richard McCrome of Richmond, Va., fished at the same location and landed 15 bluefish and 16 dolphin.

Raymond Kleen and Leonard J. Grant of the District and George Weaver, a retired attorney from Leesburg, Va., made one of the best catches of hardheads in the Point Lookout area by nabbing 52 big hardheads and 15 spot. They fished from an L. S. T. lifeboat with an outboard motor. Their success was achieved directly off the lighthouse in 12 to 15 feet of water after sundown.

Ralph Shaw, owner of a cruiser which docks in Herring Bay, and J. William Clarke, Arthur W. Hewitt, Samuel Reubin and Gerald E. Jessup, caught 9 hardheads and 20 spot near Holland Point Bar. They claimed that the croakers had just started biting when a sudden squall forced them in. Gerald E. Jessup caught his first fish on the trip.

The Ipswich Bay Tuna Derby which runs from July 1 to September 20 stepped up sharply over the weekend when 68 bluefins were taken on rod and reel and as many fish got away as a result of broken rods, popped lines and pulled out hooks.

MRS. VIOLA M. FROTHINGHAM was the first of the feminine sex to boat a tuna. She hooked a 325-pounder while drift fishing with mackerel. To add color to the situation she hauled the big bruiser to gaff in the fast time of 22 minutes. Mrs. Frothingham is well known in sport fishing circles. She boated 12 bluefins last year, the heaviest weighing 683 pounds. The woman's world record-holder for tuna is Mrs. Ben Crowninshield, who dragged in an 882-pounder to gain the distinction.

Attention Duck Hunters—The duck-hunting season opens at noon on November 18 in Maryland and closes on December 27. There will be no split season. The above dates will be continuous and include the last date.

Virginia starts her season on November 29 at 12 noon. January will be the last day you can legally hunt waterfowl. A continuous season will also prevail in Virginia.

Only five States in the Atlantic flyway chose a split season. They were Delaware, Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and New York. The other 12 Atlantic States settled for a continuous season. The daily shooting hours are the same as last year—from one-half hour before sunrise until one hour before sunset.

Bag and possession limits of four a day and eight in possession is the law in all of the Atlantic flyway States. More about ducks later.

Furniture Team Rally In 9th Fails

By Jules Loh

Heurich Brewing Company's baseball team staved off a ninth-inning rally to beat Cameo Furniture, 5-4, in the first of a three-game Washington Post Industrial League championship playoff yesterday on the West Ellipse.

Behind 5-3 as they went to bat in the last half of the ninth, Cameo loaded the bases with none out when Catcher Eddie Lloyd led off with an infield single, Pinch-Hitter Whitey Chancellor drew a walk and Joe Dicarlo was safe on a bunt.

Then First Baseman Berney Good hit into a double play, scoring Lloyd. Leftfielder Bob Dehner popped up to end the ball game, 5 to 4.

Red Geigerich, Heurich left fielder, started the game off with an infield single. Willie Kauffmann beat out a hit. Pepco Barry's sacrifice bunt placed them on second and third. Catcher Jim Castiglia knocked in the first run on a grounder to first. Charley Aquilino followed with a sharp single to left center, driving in Kauffmann and putting Heurich into a lead they held until the fifth.

Cameo narrowed the margin in the second when Lloyd singled in Buddy Day, who had walked and advanced to second on Max Coe's grounder to short.

Cameo staged a two-run rally in the fifth to take a 3-2 lead. Pitcher Johnny Clements lined a single to center, went to second on Joe Dicarlo's sacrifice bunt, and made third when Berney Good got on by an error by Jerry Zanellotti. Good stole second and Clements scored when Castiglia's low throw went through Kauffmann. Pedro Pittman walked. Rufe Crawford singled, scoring Good.

Heurich countered with a three-run sixth inning that cinched the ball game.

Third Baseman Elmer Leukhart drilled a single through second base to score Barry and Castiglia, who had doubled and walked, respectively. Pitcher Johnny Norris made an infield single and scored Jerry Zanellotti from third.

The teams will meet in the second game this afternoon at 5:30. If a third game is necessary, it will be played Wednesday at the same time.

Harmsworth Cup Won by Skip-a-Long

Detroit, Aug. 1 (AP).—Stanley Dollar's Skip-A-Long took the Harmsworth Speedboat Trophy to California today by winning the run-off race for the big British plaque. Jack Schafer's Such Crust had motor trouble and dopped out of the race at the end of the first of the two scheduled laps.

The two boats got off to one of the prettiest starts ever seen in the sun-drenched Detroit River, with Skip-A-Long less than two boat lengths ahead.

Such Crust, flying the colors of the Detroit Yacht Club, passed her on the first turn, but Skip challenged in the straight-a-way, and passed the Detroit boat in the homestretch.

Skip-A-Long, owned and driven by Dollar, won the second and decisive heat in Saturday's Harmsworth defense. Such Crust took the first heat. That made today's runoff necessary to see who got the trophy.

Skip's best speed today was 86.821 miles per hour in the contested first lap. This was almost 10 miles an hour slower than her best time in Saturday's race, where the United States team was challenged by E. A. Wilson's Miss Canada IV.

Skip-A-Long went through the formality of running the second lap although Such Crust was out.

Chesapeake Yacht Club Has Annual Rendezvous Thursday

By Happy Walker

EVERY WEEKEND finds the Chesapeake Bay dotted with small craft flying the identifying burgees of Washington clubs who summer at one of the countless bay yacht clubs. Such a popular summer place is the Chesapeake Yacht Club on West River at Shady Side, Md.

Walker

Tomorrow, the Chesapeake Yacht Club will stage its annual rendezvous with a dinner and dance prior to the takeoff Thursday for the Miles River Regatta at St. Michaels, Md. The club's officer roster includes: John M. Thomas, commodore; Harry L. Clarke, vice commodore; T. T. Keane, rear commodore; Bruce Lamond, fleet captain; H. L. Gilpin, Frank Proctor and George Dickey, directors. Joseph Ferguson is secretary treasurer and Burt Middleton is club manager.

FLASHBACK: A comedy of errors was injected into last week's Harmsworth running at Detroit. While working on Miss Canada IV, Harold Wilson's pants were stolen, including his car keys. The cautious Wilson had a replacement motor across the river in Windsor, Canada, just in case. Needing some spare parts, he crossed the wires on his car and started for Canada only to be held up at Customs, suspected of operating a stolen car until he explained his problem. (Note: He was wearing pants.)

NOTICE TO MARINERS: Potomac River—On or about August 2, 1949, Mathias Point Obstruction Lighted Buoy 3 will be discontinued in view of the fact that Mathias Point Obstruction Light has been rebuilt in its charted position and is operating in accordance with the Light List. Mathias Point Shoal Buoy 3, a first class special can painted black, will be established in position 2040 yards, 104 degrees true from Mathias Point Shoal Light. (Reference C.G.S. Chart No. 559).

FIFTH DISTRICT, U. S. Power Squadron will hold forth at Maryland Yacht Club, Fairview, Md., on Patapsco River, come August 12, 13 and 14. The annual rendezvous highlight of the Fifth District P.S. yachtmen's summer schedule will include three days of navigation contest, review of fleets, entertainment and sports. Comdr. White House Shown As Opposing Most Federal Pay Rises

The Administration yesterday revealed itself as opposed to most of the bills before Congress to give pay raises and other benefits to Federal workers.

Speaking for the Administration, Elmer B. Staats of the Budget Bureau, indorsed its bill to revise the classification act—a measure which would raise the salary of the average classified employe by $50-a-year. He opposed the Miller postal employe bill, which has been okayed by more than 250 House members.

Postmaster General Jesse Donaldson, in his testimony before the House Postoffice & Civil Service Committee, described the Miller bill as "ill-advised." While expressing sympathy with several of its six provisions, the cabinet member took them up one by one, and opposed each of them as written. He estimated the measure would cost 244 million dollars a year.

Both Donaldson and Staats testified they were opposed to any more flat pay raises. Such increases, they said, caused inequitities and dislocations in the pay structure. They insisted that the present pay inequalities in both the classified and postal pay acts be ironed out through reclassification bills.

Staats said that postal employes already had received pay raises since 1945 that averaged between 60 and 65 per cent. During that same period, he said, classified employes have been boosted only 46 per cent. Donaldson indicated he would favor abolition of the two grades for clerks and carriers to make their starting salary $2850-a-year.

SENATE SHOWDOWN: A showdown session on the classified pay bill is slated for today by the Senate committee. It's likely that the bill by Senator Long (D., La.) will be approved, despite Administration opposition. His measure would give employes an average boost of $125-a-year through reclassification.

A committee member yesterday revealed that a new section to raise the salaries of members of Congress and Capitol Hill employes may be added to the bill. He said it had been proposed to raise congressional salaries to $20,000 effective January 1, 1951. Administrative assistants would be boosted to $12,000 and all other legislative employes would get new raises in the bill.

JOB NEWS: The Army Medical Center has openings for five stenographers. Call Georgia 1000, Branch 377 for details . . . Civil Service will reopen its general clerical exam for CAF-2 and 3 jobs here in a couple of weeks. More than 37,000 persons here applied for the test last October . . . The Army Chemical Center, Md., has exams open for electronic instrument mechanic, oiler, and phone installer and repairman.

RESIGNATIONS: Carl McFarland, a well-known Washington attorney, and the five other members of the advisory board who conducted the trial examiner test for the Civil Service Commission, have resigned.

The board has been under a hot fire for its conduct of the test which was required under the Administrative Practices Act. It originally ruled ineligible a number of examiners with long years of experience. Some of them were rated eligible to hold their jobs when their cases were reconsidered. Several of the board members were accused of racial and economic prejudice in a brief filed with the Civil Service Commission. The Senate committee will investigate the work of the advisory board.

PROMOTIONS: Civil Service has lifted its "brake" on grade promotions. Since the war's end, it has required a Federal worker to serve in his grade at least six months before he can be promoted.

That restriction has been lifted, except in these cases: a new probational appointee must serve at least six months before he can be promoted; and a war service or temporary whose appointment is converted to probational must also serve a like period before he can be promoted.

LOYALTY: The 14 regional loyalty boards have been consolidated into four area offices to be located in New York, Chicago, San Francisco, and this city. Civil Service estimates the merger will save up to $50,000 a year.

District Pays the Sales Tax, but Not Without Grumbling...

First-Day Sidelights

With the Sales Tax Added, That'll Be—Exasperating

Johnny's Restaurant, 1313 E st. nw., boosted the poor man's drink to 11 cents a glass, attributing the penny rise to higher taxes and license fees.

Hodges Restaurant, 307 9th st. nw., famous roast beef house, cut the price of a 15-cent brew to 14 cents and tacked the penny sales tax on, in effect saving guzzlers the penny tax. The 10-cent glasses continue as before.

Washington's "daylight residents," commuters from nearby Maryland and Virginia, felt the initial sock of the new taxes when they purchased their usual week-long cigarette stocks for the household. After paying this time, "I'm glad I live in Virginia. I'll buy my smokes there next time."

The District sales tax may be the final straw to bolster buyer resistance against purchase of new cameras, an official of the Robbins' Camera Shop, 529 14th st. nw., declared sadly. "Washington will definitely lose business," he predicted.

The cultural pursuits suffered some momentary confusion as a result of the sales tax. A George Washington University student was heard debating the wisdom of going to a bookshop for a few circulating library volumes. In another section, a pair of sporting youths was concerned about the possible sales tax on rental of a pool table for a few games.

Both are tax-free.

"They're not hurt much now, but wait till they buy the winter suits," a salesman at Bell Clothes, 916 F st. nw., commented on customer reactions. Summer weight duds run about 50 cents in sales tax, but the winter garments will be about double in tax, he pointed out.

The delivery business in Greater Washington is expected to gain and lose as a result of the sales tax. Charles Kopeland, executive secretary, Silver Spring Board of Trade, said now that the District has its own sales tax, fewer stores will have to deliver there.

Tourists have been trying to pay a sales tax at the National Gift Shop, 1205 Pennsylvania ave. nw., souvenir shop, for several months, since they were used to paying tax at home. Yesterday, the tourists weren't griping, but local residents who wandered in were, a clerk reported.

At the National Press Club, a luncher had the law on his side, but failed to convince the management. He was given a check for $2.10 for two persons and charged a 4-cent sales tax. He objected, pointing out that sales tax officials have authorized dividing the total charge by the number eating and considering that the base for tax purposes. Under this method, the individual meals would have been listed at $1.05, and therefore exempt from any taxes.

Hungry Senators tasted the sales tax yesterday—it was applied to meals costing more than $1.25 in the Senate Restaurant.

One Senator said privately he didn't object to paying it, even though he voted against the levy, but thought it might create a precedent for the States to apply sales taxes in Federal areas, for example, in service post exchanges.

Home Rule Has Little Chance of Action Now

Legislation May Not Even Get Out Of Subcommittee; Filibuster Indicated

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

House District Judiciary subcommittee members yesterday indicated scant likelihood of their acting this session on the Washington home rule bill.

The subcommittee will meet at 10 a. m. Wednesday to consider the legislation. Supporters of the Senate-approved home rule plan have been a minority of the group. One member said privately it was a poor time to think of sending the bill to the floor because of the near-certainty of an end-of-the-session filibuster against it.

Another member of the group, Rep. Olin E. Teague (D., Tex.) said he would vote neither for the bill nor for a motion to forward the measure to the full House District Committee without recommendation—a move designed to place the issue before the 25-member District group without committing the 7-member subcommittee to any position.

Harris Noncommittal

Chairman Oren Harris (D., Ark.) of the subcommittee declined to say what line of action on the home rule bill he may support. He opposed a similar measure last year.

The home rule issue passed over without discussion in yesterday's House District Committee meeting, but the group approved five other local bills. They would:

1. Define new standards for industrial life insurance for increased protection to policy holders.

2. Revise the law on group insurance, to permit small groups to obtain such insurance through a trustee setup.

3. Permit the pooling of trust accounts into common funds for improved investment.

Contract Provision Changed

4. Boost from $1000 to $3000 the amount of contracts that District contracting officers can award without specific approval of the Commissioners.

5. Exempt from the District personal property tax the Sons of the American Revolution here. Their building is now exempt. The measure would erase some $1200 in back taxes, penalties and interest, charged under a District ruling that made their personal property taxable.

The bills are slated for House action Monday.

U. S. Wins 10

Suits Dropped In Telephone Removals

Three persons yesterday withdrew their injunction suits by which they sought to prevent removal of telephones after it was charged that the phones were used for gambling.

This brought to 10 the number of court skirmishes the United State's Attorney's office has won in the telephone removal cases.

The phone users filed a total of 37 suits, winning the first one. Twenty six are still pending.

Those cases dismissed yesterday were:

Ellis Wright of 1404 Swann st. nw., who is now serving 20 to 60 months in jail for pandering. It was charged that his telephone was used for both prostitution business as well as gambling activity.

Arnold Baker, whose phone was at 432 Lincoln ave., Takoma Park, Md. It was charged that his phone made numerous calls to a Silver Hill, Md., address where the prosecution said there was a ticker relaying information of races and other sporting activity.

Martin McGuire, also of the Lincoln ave. address. His phone was also linked to the Silver Hill location.

The Government is represented by Assistant United States Attorneys Samuel Abrams and Stafford Grady.

Arlington Man Convicted on Lottery Charge

Ernest Gatling, 38, was found guilty of operating a lottery yesteday in Arlington County Court, despite his plea that he was "just trying to find out how to write 'em" when Arlington police arrested him June 18.

Gatling, of 2222 S. Glebe rd., Arlington, was sentenced to $50 and costs plus 30 days in jail by Judge Hugh Reid.

Officer Russell Runyon, who made the arrest, testified he saw the defendant scribbling in a numbers book from his scout car about 150 feet away.

Gatling claimed he found the book in an empty trailer about 18 months ago, had kept it home in a drawer till the day of his arrest, when he took it out to practice in.

Said Judge Hugh Reid: "This uncanny chain of circumstances—innocent things—has the law of coincidence overworked."

Judge Reid dismissed a second charge of carrying a concealed weapon against Gatling. Gatling's attorney, Miss Anna Hedrick, said she would appeal the numbers conviction.

"Mere possession of a book like this is not sufficient to convict a man," she said, pointing out "the only concrete evidence" in the case was 50 cents found on Gatling, plus two numbers slips dated the previous day.

Given a similar sentence by Judge Reid yesterday was James Higgins of 833 3d st. nw., who pleaded guilty to a charge of operating a lottery.

He was arrested July 8, when four numbers books and $158 in cash were found in his possession.

Grumbling Greets Sales Tax Along With Some Confusion

mainly in eating places serving middle and high priced meals. Waitresses were uncertain about how to determine the tax when several meals were listed on one check.

Brooke reminded restauranteurs that this may be avoided by issuing separate checks or by dividing the total check by the number of persons participating and using the average as the tax base.

Brooke reported that about 1500 applications were received yesterday for certificates of registration, boosting the total thus far to 10,500.

"We're getting a delayed response," Brooke commented. About 50 certificate numbers were assigned across the counter to retailers desiring to fill out resale certificates, exempting their purchases from tax.

The sales tax force had a busy day with from three to six persons stationed at the counter in Room 210, District Building, answering questions of an estimated 200 persons. Others were on telephone duty handling similar inquiries.

Brooke found retailers "exceptionally clear on interpretations of the regulations" and said many "call here just for verification." One of the most persistent inquiries was from wholesalers asking whether they were required to register. The answer was "no."

Pennies, principal coin involved in the tax transactions, were in plentiful supply. Officials at the Munsey Trust Co. and the Washington Loan & Trust Co. reported only normal demand for the coppers.

Retailers pointed out that coins were being received from customers as well as disbursed to them in change, but that pennies are not being tucked away in containers as they are in Maryland sales tax collections. The local tax will be paid on gross receipts, not the actual tax collections.

A few dealers used small receptacles for the tax pennies simply as a test of how much they may earn on the collections.

In the 5 and 10-cent stores, for the most part, patrons were given the privilege—if they asked for them—of obtaining a sales tax memorandum "which permits additional purchases today up to the amount shown without payment of additional tax."

The merchandising manager of the G. C. Murphy Co., 1214 G st. nw., E. G. Allen, said the company experience in other sales tax areas has been that the "breakage" repays the additional costs of collection.

Liquor stores have maintained earlier prices, adding only the sales tax, a quick survey indicated. Several operators admitted they have large stocks at the previous gallonage rates and the additional license fee has been absorbed.

Bar sales prices, however, showed some increases and some standing pat. The sales tax was being tacked on all servings, however, except those below 14 cents such as beer.

The Restaurant Beverage Association of Washington said an official of the sales tax staff has ruled that even though beer is sold for a dime, the second glass will be subject to tax.

Two Indicted In Slayings By Grand Jury

The District grand jury yesterday returned 48 indictments in District Court, including two for murder and four for lottery operation and number slips possession.

Mrs. Alice L. Morton, 24, of 609 2d st. ne., was indicted for first degree murder in the death, July 13, of David F. Stephens, 32, of 618 8th st. ne.

Police testimony said that Stephens and Mrs. Morton, who had lived in a common-law relationship, quarrelled over rent money Mrs. Morton got for two rooms. She fired two shots at Morton through a glass door, police said.

A second degree murder charge was returned against William C. Jones, 39, of 1620 4th st. nw. He was charged with the fatal stabbing July 2 of William N. Nuttingham of the same address.

According to police the two men had been drinking. At 4th and P sts. nw., they started joking. The joking led to argument and ended with Jones drawing a knife and stabbing Nuttingham, according to police.

Phillip Fludd, 27, of 701 3rd st. sw., arrested June 22.

Richmond Hairston, 40, operator of a newsstand at 1717 14th st. nw., charged with operating a lottery and possessing slips between June 3 and 13.

Mary Tinsley, 26, of 318 New York ave. nw. and Nathaniel Lewis, 35, of 1129 New Jersey ave. nw., charged with lottery operation and slips possession between June 6 and 14.

Traffic Tips

2 Don't drive when drinking or drink when driving. Also don't drive when tired out. Your brain rings like lead instead of like steel when your system is tarnished with ardent spirits or with the toxins of fatigue. Your nerve and leg reactions are slower.

If you get drowsy, or exhausted, pull off the road in a safe place, lower the windows to get fresh air, and take a nap. You and others will be safer instead of sorrier.

2 Dairies Raise Milk Price, Others to Follow Suit Soon

Two District dairies raised the retil price of milk one cent yesterday, as higher prices for producers also went into effect. Other area milk companies are expected to follow suit either Wednesday or later in the week.

New delivered price of 21½ cents a quart was charged yesterday by Thompson's, which handles about 13 per cent of the milk consumed in the area, and Harvey's, which servies Maryland customers as well as some in the District.

Alexandria Dairy said an increase would go into effect today, while Chevy Chase-Chestnut Farms Dairy, the area's largest distributor, will maintain the 20½ cent price through today at least, an official said.

The producers' price rise was announced Friday by the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers' Association, effective yesterday. It amounted to 50 cents a hundredweight over the previous price of $5.56 per hundredweight.

The four major distributors who buy from nonmembers of the association have not yet increased the buying price, but will have to shortly, they indicated yesterday, and their selling price will be raised also, probably within two or three days.

D. C. Housebreaker Flees Georgia Jail

Keeping a promise he made to Washington police a few months ago, Kenneth Hundred, a graduate engineer who used his talents to become a de luxe house prowler, has broken out of jail in Georgia.

Police here were notified yesterday of his escape from a penal camp at Milledgeville Saturday morning.

They prepared last night to see, if possible, that he does not keep the rest of his promise, to return here and resume house-breaking operations.

After he had been returned to Georgia to "complete" a sentence there, police said, they interviewed him and he admitted 14 housebreakings on Connecticut ave., Woodley rd. and Tilden st. Detectives said he got $3500 worth of loot in three weeks last April.

He was in trouble here in 1937 and 1939 for housebreaking, has a long string of aliases, and has served time in Maryland, Georgia and other States, police said.

They said he is 45, a fastidious dresser and liver, who burglarizes only wealthy homes. They said he is a graduate engineer who uses his skill to get into other people's homes, and out of jails.

New Trial Due

Mental Test Ordered in Incest Case

Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut of District Court yesterday ordered a mental examination for a 36-year-old woman whose testimony convicted her father of incest.

The action was taken at the request of the father, Bernard L. Bottomley, 53. He was convicted in 1947 of having sexual relations with his daughter, Alna Bottomley, and sentenced to serve 4 to 12 years in prison.

Bottomley got the conviction set aside after he petitioned the court that he had been so "shocked and confused" by the charge at the trial that he could not adequately defend himself. He is to have a new trial.

He said his daughter's mental development was arrested and that she was a "doll or manikin" in the hands of her mother, Mamie A. Bottomley.

Through his attorney, William Gallagher, Bottomley charged that the daughter was unable to understand the oath or to distinguish between right and wrong.

Charged in Assault

Bennie Lee Carr, 28, a laborer, was charged yesterday in Municipal Court with criminally assaulting a 34-year-old mother in her home in the Kalorama rd. area. Bond was set at $25,000 with the hearing date continued until August 8.

According to police, the alleged victim complained that on July 27, a man answering Carr's description punched in her screen door and then raped her after threatening to kill her. Carr's address was given as 953 25th st. nw.

Rent Boosts Sought

The B. F. Saul Co. has petitioned for approximately 15 per cent rent increases in the 68-unit apartment building at 1474 Columbia rd. nw.

The District Rent Control Office said yesterday that the owners are seeking to boost one-room apartments from the present $27.50 monthly rental to $31.75 and comparable increases on the larger units.

Thieves Get Safe, $1800

Thieves entered the New Sun Restaurant, 1016 14th st. nw., early yesterday morning and took not only $1800 in cash but also the 200-pound safe which held the money, police reported.

Raymond Toy, the owner, said that $600 represented the weekend receipts while $1200 was the monthly payroll for his 10 employes.

Bond Denied Alexandria Wife In Bottle Death of Corporal

The Washington Post

MRS. RUTH MAXWELL . . . pleads not guilty

CORPL. GARDNER MAXWELL . . . glass gashes throat

Pretty Mrs. Ruth Maxwell, 28-year-old waitress, yesterday was held for the grand jury without bond on a charge of murdering her Army corporal husband with a milk bottle in Alexandria.

The soft-featured brunette appeared composed as her attorney, Walter I. Young, entered a plea of not guilty, based on self-defense, in Alexandria Civil and Police Court. She wore a plain blue dress; her hair was braided over the top of her head.

Her husband, Corpl. Gardner Maxwell, 30, of Fort Belvoir, bled to death after she struck him with a milk bottle during an argument over money, just after midnight Sunday morning, according to police.

Judge James R. Duncan, refused to grant bond on recommendation of Commonweath's Attorney Howard W. Smith, jr.

Young had asked the court for low bond because, he said, it would be difficult to locate Mrs. Maxwell's father, a traveling salesman in the West.

Mrs. Maxwell, who has two children by a previous marriage, was married to Corpl. Maxwell in December, 1947, three weeks after they met at an Army camp in Tacoma, Wash. He also had been previously married, Fort Belvoir officials reported.

Young complained in court that The Washington Post used a picture of Mrs. Maxwell in Monday's paper that portrayed her smiling, without stating the picture was taken before the tragedy. He said this was "highly prejudicial," and also observed that the original picture was taken and used without authorization by Mrs. Maxwell.

She was arrested while bending over the body of her husband in front of their rooming house at 723 N. Washington st., Alexandria.

Police said she reported her husband struck her at least once and ripped her blouse. She said she struck him with a milk bottle in self-defense, according to police.

The fatal argument occured when she dropped her purse, he picked it up and refused to return it, police said she stated.

Police reported he bled to death —his jugular vein shattered by a piece of glass from the milk bottle.

She said they had arguel earlier in the evening when she refused to return change from a dollar bill he had given her for a beer and cigarettes at the Non-Commissioned Officers Club at Fort Belvoir, police said. He called her an insulting name, she declared.

Their financial hagglings started, she was quoted as having said, when she injured her back and was unable to continue working as a waitress.

Abandonment Of 2 Infants Under Probe

Baltimore authorities are investigating the abandonment of two infant girls by a former Georgetown University student and his wife.

George J. Kelly, 19, and his wife, Ardath, 22, now living in New York, admitted abandoning the girls. The couple said the children were their own, according to State's Attorney J. Bernard Wells' office.

The Kelly couple testified in Juvenile Court in Baltimore recently that they left their two-month-old daughter, Kathleen Anne, at the nursery home of Mrs. Gertrude Hailey. Mrs. Hailey testified she turned the infant over to a man who said he was an uncle.

This child, now called Bernadette Stoneberger, is currently in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Elick Stoneberger, of Riviera Beach, Md. The State's attorney would not reveal how the Stonebergers said they obtained the child.

Judge Charles E. Moylan ordered an investigation of the circumstances.

The Kellys have also admitted they abandoned a second baby, Teresa, when about one week old, on the doorstep of the SS. Philip and James Convent last April 1. This infant has been turned over to the State Welfare Department. Kelly, under court order, is paying for its support.

Kelly formerly attended Georgetown University School of Foreign Service here and lived in the 1900 block of N st. nw. He said he and his wife are living apart in New York, according to Baltimore authorities.

Three Quakers Refuse to Sign Loyalty Oath

Baltimore, Aug. 1 (AP).—Three Quakers working for the State and city put their jobs at stake today by refusing to sign a loyalty oath.

Maryland's new law against subversive activities provides for their automatic dismissal. Attorney General Hall Hammond advised no immediate action against them, however.

The Homewood Friends Meeting, one of the two Quaker groups in Baltimore, accompanied the action of its members with a denunciation of the law as "an attempt to abridge freedom of thought and conscience."

The three employes are Dr. Miriam E. Brailey, director of the Bureau of Tuberculosis in the City Health Department; Miss Doris Shamleffer, personal examiner in the State Employment and Registration Department, and Miss Elizabeth Haas, a member of the staff at Enoch Pratt Library.

Each of the three affirmed their loyalty in letters to their immediate superiors but refused to sign the pledge on religious grounds and because it might be interpreted as indorsement of the law.

The District share is part of $850,000 provisionally allotted to the 48 States. Maryland will receive $13,216 and Virginia $17,774 to conduct similar anti-pollution studies under the Water Pollution Control Act, passed by the last Congress.

County to Decide Test Case on Cab Licenses Monday

The decision in a test case involving Montgomery County's right to levy license fees on taxicabs will be announced in Rockville Police Court next Monday, Judge Alger Y. Barbee said yesterday.

The test suit asking recovery of $203 in license fees from the county was filed by John S. Bigelow, operator of the We Cab Co., Bethesda. Bigelow's attorney, James H. Pugh, said he represented 166 county taxi operators who have paid the county roughly $6500 in license fees.

Judge Marbee said he had given Montgomery County Attorney David MacDonald until Wednesday to file a written brief defending the county license tax. Attorney Pugh's suit is based on a preliminary Montgomery Circuit Court ruling which held the 1945 law under which the taxing ordinance was adopted conflicts with Maryland State law.

George Moran

Oakland, Calif., Aug. 1 (U.P.).—George Moran, famous in the 1920's as one of the "Two Black Crows," died in the charity ward of a hospital here today at the age of 67.

A combination of diabetes and a stroke were responsible for the death of the man who made millions laugh at the jokes he and his partner cracked over the radio and on records.

Most American homes had at least one record made by the famous blackface comedy team of Moran and Mack and many of the gags they first used are still heard today.

Inactive in recent years, Moran still "made the rounds" of the booking agencies up to the time of his illness. He had been living in an inexpensive hotel here since his partner was killed in an auto accident near Mesa, Ariz., in 1934.

Along Our Street

with Aunt Penny

Several tennis players in the neighborhood have been working for months on a court in the lot just around the corner. It's finished now and busy most of the time. I was walking by this afternoon and stopped for a short time to watch a "singles" game. Two other folks arrived while I was there and the first couple suggested they join them in a "doubles" match. So no one had to wait for the court—they all shared it together.

This same principle applies to lots of things. Take party-line telephone service, for example. Just the other night I read that three out of every four telephone subscribers have party-line service. The reason, of course, is that party lines mean more service for more people sooner. And I've found that party-line service is good service when everyone uses it "sharingly."

Women's Clubs Vie for Better Government

Contest Spotlights Community Work

By Genevieve Reynolds

IN TINY Lattimore, N. C., the Woman's Club recently scoured the town for the most pressing community need. Two days before scheduled elections, members discovered that the village council had been inactive for 17 years.

So they rounded up candidates, campaigned and produced the biggest vote in the memory of the town's 450 residents. Once the winners took office, the feminine clubbers persuaded them to reorganize and activate the entire town council.

Meantime, the A B C Study Club at Cameron, Mo., decided that the community's greatest need was an odd job agency. Under Mrs. John Kirkendall, project chairman, the agency now is a thriving concern, patronized by every family in the environs, and the club's Mrs. Fix-Its are receiving smiles of approval.

The adjacent Silver Spring (Md.), Woman's Club has inaugurated and expanded a sick room loan closet. A few bed sheets have grown into a collection of over 100, plus seven hospital beds. Nearly all articles needed for sick rooms can be borrowed free of charge. Last year the seven hospital beds serviced 166 families in the community.

And, in nearby Shepherdstown, W. Va., the Woman's Club is converting the old town jail into a library. From now on, books instead of bars will be the inmates' fare.

Only Sample Projects

These are only a few unusual community projects that 2895 women's organizations are whipping into perfection as entries in the General Federation of Women's Clubs' Nation-wide "Build a Better Community" contest, launched here at the Statler Hotel last January. Purpose of the contest is to stimulate improved community programs among the federation's five million affiliated members throughout the United States and Alaska. The Kroger Co. is cooperating by providing a total of $60,000 in contest prizes. January 15, 1950, is the closing date, and on the following March 15 State winners will be announced; national winners around April 15.

While there is infinite variety in community projects now in progress, the majority of participating clubs are emphasizing youth. Libraries run a close second. Illinois has the greatest number of entries, with Iowa second and Virginia third.

Several of the Southern organizations have initiated specific projects to better the lot of the Negroes in their respective communities. For example, the Delphian Club in Mangum, Okla., has opened and is maintaining a branch library for Negroes. At Pampa, Tex., the Twentieth Century Club also has as its project aid to the Negro population. In Summersville, Ga., the Woman's Club is supporting a county hospital, a Negro library, tuberculosis and venereal disease surveys.

Playground in Alaska

Up in Wrangell, Alaska, the Woman's Club is erecting a community playground.

In cooperation with UNESCO, the Saturday Club at Logan, Ohio, arranged for a Finnish school teacher to spend the summer in the town.

Among the clubs providing fluorine dental treatment for children is the Hood Canal Woman's Club at Hoodsport, Wash.

Out in Arcadia, Kans., the Woman's Study Club's project is "securing a resident physician" for the town.

The Ambridge (Pa.), Junior Women's Club is sponsoring a public scool dental clinic with flourine treatment for children. Augusta (Ga.), Junior Woman's Club is establishing a hospital reading room, a dental clinic and an entertainment program for children in the hospital. Sheridan (Wyo.), Junior Woman's Club is establishing free kindergartens in public schools.

For Fewer Fires

Pearisburg (Va.), Junior Woman's Club is helping to organize a volunteer fire department and purchasing a fire truck for the community, in addition to aiding State youth camps and sponsoring scholarships.

Obtaining telephone service for the community is the paramount project of the Woman's Club in Ezel, Ky.

A club in Paterson, N. J., has a handicapped children's music project. Members provide instructions transportation and sheet music, and keep the musical instruments repaired.

Judging from the entries pouring into GFWC headquarters at 1714 N st. nw., few of the larger city clubs are participating in the "Build a Better Community" contest. None of the affiliated D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs have reported specific projects.

An exception is a report from Raleigh (N. C.), Woman's Club and its protege the Future Mothers Club, composed of girls 8 to 12 years of age. The Future Mothers Club which meets each Saturday, has established a council civic group to train its members in civic participation, adopted a slum clearance project, plus a project for the rehabilitation of displaced persons. the parent woman's club battled and obtained a cerebral palsy clinic, plus a working slum clearance program and the establishment of a kindergarten.

Back Yard Beach

Soak Up Sun In Your Own Back Yard

You don't have to live near the beach to have a lovely golden tan your friends will envy. You can acquire one in lazy luxury in your own back yard or on your terrace if you have a comfortable beach roll to stretch out on.

Here are simple directions, from the Woman's Home Companion, for making a roll-up sun mat. You need one long strip of plain denim and one of striped, 2 1/3 yards long; an extra yard for boxing strips to go down the sides; six rolls of quilt wadding for stuffing; 2½ yards of cotton tape for braided ties.

You do this by cutting enough 3-inch-wide boxing strips to piece together two side strips 2 1/3 yards long; pin together, baste sides of fabric with these strips, wrong side out.

Stitch seams on machine, wrong sides out, leaving 12 inches open at middle of one side to use as stuffing vent; then seam two open ends of the sun mat. Turn work right side out, seam again ¼ inch in from edge to make boxed seam. Fold wadding into six pads the width of beach roll and 12 inches the other way; flatten and stuff first one through opening vent.

Push bat firmly to one end, anchor with pins, stitch across roll. Continue to set in place, one by one, stitching each bat. Work alternately toward ends, then set last bat in middle at vent and sew up opening.

For ease in carrying, braid three 2½-inch strips of strong cotton tape and sew to beach roll eight inches from one end. Then roll up mattress and tie braided tape around it.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Woman Wants Help, But Not Psychiatric Help, In Overcoming Emotional Illness That Began Ten Years Ago, Turning Her Against Humanity

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I need help, but not psychiatric help—for I very well understand the reasons why I am as I am. And is there not some treatment of personality problems, other than a diagnosis to tell you why you have them?

What I require is the proper treatment to help me recover some joy of living. About 10 years ago my life fell apart; all the love went out of it. In the years since then my personality has changed completely.

Formerly I was filled with love. Life was a thing of beauty. I enjoyed the respect of all who knew me, and had the love of family and friends. Now I do not like anybody, much less love the people I know.

Spurns Old Friends and Snubs Newcomers

I AM very rude to new acquaintances, and I have deliberately brushed off old friends, who tried for years to forgive me and finally ceased to make the effort.

I feel that I am quite an ill woman, although not mentally, at least not yet; and I do so want to live out the rest of my life more gracefully. I have read everything you have recommended—except "The Guiding Light," which I cannot locate,—but apparently something more is needed in my case. What do you suggest? C. P.

Is She Seeking or Dodging Help?

DEAR C. P.: It is aptly said of truth-seeking minds, "When the pupil is ready, the Master appears——," meaning that you attract helpful information as a magnet draws needles, if your nature is honestly open to true solutions of grievous problems.

And significantly, it seems to me, you have managed to keep away from the book, already twice mentioned here, that in my opinion outlines the proper treatment of emotional dyspepsia such as yours. I refer to "The Healing Light" by Agnes Sanford, (Macalaster Park Publishing Co.), which you miscall "The Guiding Light,"—and cannot locate because you don't rightly ask for it.

You quite understand, you say defensively, the reasons why you are as you are; but very obviously that isn't true—because "to understand all is to forgive all," and your embittered attitude towards humanity is symptomatic of completely discouraged self-rejection.

Soul Must Have Some Fellowship

IT STRIKES ME that your life history has been, from your viewpoint, a bewildering saga of frustration and humiliation, of struggle and disappointment, of personal mistakes and secret sins, and of "unfair" suffering caused by others' behavior, that seems too painful to think about, since the climactic "crash"—whatever it was—10 years ago.

No doubt you've read enough, in a general way, about neurotic behavior and the causes thereof to realize that you are afflicted by past conditioning and the cumulative penalties for maladjusted, unwise or "sick" performance. But actually you don't know the "ins and outs" of what broke you down; and no one else can shed light on that, and help your crushed spirit mend and regain vigor, unless you search the record honestly.

Now back to Mrs. Sanford's book, a godsend for the emotionally ill who distrust psychiatry, for it reminds us that Christian soul-cleansing is powerful therapy; and the author tells of the vital elan she regained via confession and the sacrament of communion. She tells how she felt burnt out by life; how she was led to try this technique of renewal; of her conscientious but dry-hearted testing of it; and of the glowing vigor and joy, the love and Thanksgiving, the electric current of well-being, that were rekindled. M. H.

Pressing Tips For That New Look

To keep your "best" dresses looking brand new, local sewing center experts offer these helpful pressing tips: Such fine fabrics as rayon, natural silk and nylon need special attention. Rayon and nylon are pressed in the same manner—with iron regulated at a low heat. Press garments on the wrong side to preserve the sheen of the fabric. Use a pressing cloth, covered with a slightly moistened cheesecloth. This insures even dampening. Lighter weight, smooth-finished rayons can be pressed without the protection of a cloth. Press natural silk directly on the wrong side with a slightly hotter iron than needed for rayon. Be sure iron is regulated to keep an even temperature, as silk scorches easily.

Enjoy Them Fully at Each Stage

Children Develop at Their Own Rate

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

IT IS in the very nature of motherhood to want to see the swift unfolding of the child's capacities and personality. It is a maternal anxiety to see how normal the child is and what he is going to be that sparks these longings and leads the mother to force the child into the next step of development, even if he is not ready for it.

To this end she props the limp figure against pillows as a means of inspiring him to want to sit erect. She pulls him to his feet and, with hands under arms, propels him around the room hoping to teach him to walk.

She is forever prodding in his mouth to determine whether, by any chance, a tooth has appeared. She seems unable to enjoy the child at his present stage of development in her haste to hurry him into the next one.

But every child when born has a certain timetable for his development which is fixed by his heredity. No matter how badly a mother may want to see those teeth pop in or enjoy the child's out-distancing all his playmates and relatives in sitting up, standing and walking, she will have to wait until all these phases of development take place at their own proper time.

The influence a parent has upon development is a more subtle one. That is, to furnish the child with the food ammunition for growth and place him in an environment in which he is so happy and secure that he progresses consistently without psychic handicap.

The environment must be a loving one, for then the baby unfolds as nature has determined that he should. He needs warm affection as well as fresh air, sunshine and good food.

It is well for mothers to forget that impossible "average" child and realize that the average is just the medium between the tall and the short, the lean and the fat and is not, necessarily, any more normal than either.

This will keep her from feeling any disappointment when her own child deviates from the average standards other children seem to be meeting and prevent her from embarking on a forcing process which is doomed to failure.

If the baby's own time table of development is a slow one, then she should do her part to furnish the fundamental necessities of food and environment and trust to nature to do the rest.

FOR ELIZABETH ARDEN'S first ready-to-wear collection, the distinguished Spanish designer, Castillo, created this dinner dress of dramatic red taffeta. The silhouette is one of the season's most outstanding, featuring the short tunic with flared overskirt for evening wear. Clip-cap of black velvet with simulated aigrette feather trim is also by Castillo, and he tosses in another typical World War I touch—the black fox barrel muff

Arden Adds Dressmaker to Name Synonymous With Beauty

By Peggy Preston

HEREAFTER don't think of a lipstick when you speak of Elizabeth Arden, La lady of the expert make-up and hairdos has turned dressmaker, and come up with her first ready-to-wear collection.

It's a luxury-trade collection, however, and one we won't see hanging around on racks carrying price tags of $39.50. High fashion shops across the country will be displaying the Arden gowns this fall and winter along with the handiwork of such top notchers as Dior, Adrian, Carnegie and the rest.

Miss Arden, who has been dabbling in the custom-made business for the past several years decided she was ready to go "wholesale" this season. She has done it with the help of Castillo, the skilled designer whom she found in Paquin's salon in Paris. Having won his American laurels with a succession of price-winning designs, he has stepped nimbly into the ready-to-wear bracket and is all set to add a French touch of his own to our local fashions. He receives equal credit with his boss in the labels on the collection which read "Elizabeth Arden-Castillo."

Irene Castle Silhouette

This reporter looked at the new collection in Miss Arden's delicately tinted and perfumed shop on New York's Fifth Avenue. The Castillo mark, bold and dramatic, was stamped on each costume in contrast to the pastel pink and blue tones that are typical of all Arden products.

The Elizabeth Arden-Castillo combination shows a decided taste for the silhouette of Irene Castle. It fancies short tunic undershirts, covered with a "calyx" skirt which points out at either side; dramatic colors such as lipstick red and brillian jewel tones in satins; touches of black braid, filigree, etc., signifying the Spanish influence.

The same little hat in a variation for each costume was shown throughout. It is one that can be copied easily and we would not be surprised to see it crop up on hat bars at bargain basement prices before long. It is an ingenious little double clip affair—two shallow pillboxes slanting like a roof over the head and wired so that it clings to the head.

Arden Remains Young

But more interesting than even her latest venture is Miss Arden herself, who was on hand to see to the staging of her collection. Slim, energetic and gay, little Miss Arden hardly looks the part of a woman who has headed a famous business concern for more than 30 years.

Judging from her complexion, figure and general look on life, it might not be a bad idea for all women to follow her rule, which is—work and keep happy. If lines there are in the Arden face, you have to look to find them. And her waistline is as trim as a young athlete's.

There's never a dull moment in the Arden routine, nor a lull either. From lipsticks to horses (she's considered our foremost lady of the turf) to dressmaking—quite a schedule for a lifetime.

2.5 Billion Lbs. Down the Drain!

AMERICANS use about 2½ billion pounds of soap a year, and last year's soap consumption was fully 6 per cent higher than that of the year before, according to the 1949 Britannica Book of the Year.

In addition to the huge quantities of soap, consumers also used up to about 400,000,000 pounds of synthetic detergents.

Tests conducted by the Department of Agriculture revealed that, with cotton fabrics, natural soap is more effective than synthetic detergents, when used in soft water, but that many of the latter are fully twice as efficient as natural soap in hard water.

About Selling Old Portraits

I have a portarit of the artist Ruebens which I believe to be authentic and which I would like to sell if so. Would you advise me the proper person or persons to contact? J. M. M.

In order to get definite authentication of the picture it must be examined by X-ray and other special equipment by experts. One museum in the country which has all the necessary equipment for authentication is the Fogg Museum in Boston. However, because sending or taking the picture to Boston would entail some expense on your part, it has occurred to me that you might like to have a trained person here look at the picture. A man who restores oil paintings professionally and has had much experience in the field is Mr. L. Sigsbee Gilhom. I suggest you write him at 1084, Alexandria, Va., and arrange for a consultation. For this service he charges a small consultation fee.

Could you give me any information on how to be a model or what it takes to be a model? A. J.

The July, 1949, issue of Seventeen has an article titled "Do You Know the Score for the Job of a Live Model?" This article gives the answers to such questions as what your daily job as a model would be, what the physical requirements are, earnings, advantages and disadvantages of the profession. The article points out that training for modeling is available by correspondence course, from modeling schools or employers and through advertising agencies.

Because some professional modeling schools also help place their graduates in jobs, it would seem that would be the best type of training for you. Listed under "Models-Living" in the yellow pages of the telephone book are several model schools in Washington. I suggest you arrange for an interview soon with someone in charge at one or more of these schools and discuss the entire situation. If you are still in your early teens—from your letter I infer you are—you may need to wait for a year or so before you actually enroll in a modeling course. But, even though you do not enroll now the next years can be busy ones spent in preparation for your career.

First of all, learn what you should eat for a healthful diet—and eat it. The sparkle of eye, sheen in your hair and clear complexion so prized by models are the result, not of cosmetics, but healthful diets, exercise and enough sleep. Also, you should start right now a schedule of perfect personal grooming. In addition, you should read fashion magazines and books on dressing becomingly to help you understand styles and choose those for yourself which will bring out your best features. If you have an up-and-coming home economics teacher in your school she can be lots of help to you in both diet and choosing dress styles and colors which are the most becoming.

As with most of the so-called glamorous jobs, it takes lots of work to prepare for becoming a model. But, given average looks and the will to do the preparation, you can succeed.

We have a sterling silver cocktail shaker which was recently given us as a gift. It has been in my husband's family for a good many years and apparently was never used much. Will you tell me what to use to clean the inside, since it is impossible to get my hand into it. I have used baking soda, also ammonia, but neither has done it any good. The water just turns green, but does not clean and the sides of it have turned green when I used the above. M. J. T.

There is really no home method which would thoroughly clean the inside of the shaker. I suggest you take it to a metal refinisher who has the mechanical equipment to buff the interior. When completely cleaned on the inside, if the shaker is dried thoroughly after each use, you should have no further trouble. One firm which does this work can be reached by calling Metropolitan 1134.

YOU CAN'T expect much FOR 39.50

. . . but we have some at that price. We want you to compare this machine with our large stock of new and reconditioned models before you buy. We think that you will want more than the least, because the cheapest has so little to offer.

OLNEY AREA
Montgomery County, Md.

An excellent 200-acre farm, 800 ft. frontage, on ROUTE 97 (Olney-Brookville Pike). There are 150 acres in magnificent woodland, much virgin timber, through which the unimproved road winds. The balance of the land (Chester and Manor loam) is under cultivation or in pasture.

In addition to a tenant house and usual farm buildings, there is a delightful 100-year-old brick Colonial type residence with 8 beautifully proportioned rooms, and finished 3d floor of 3 rooms, and a full basement.

The 2 original stairs are continuous to the 3d floor and are charming. The residence has to be modernized but would justify a generous expenditure.

This property may be had for $225 an acre which is an attractive price for unimproved acreage in that area.

Boys' Forum Group Visits FBI, Johnson

Ninety-six youngsters from 48 states continued their first-hand examination of the workings of a democracy yesterday as part of the activities here of the week-long Boys' Forum of National Government under American Legion auspices.

The boys toured the FBI, heard an off-the-record talk by Attorney General Tom Clark, and were addressed by Defense Secretary Johnson.

They also heard American Legion Commander Perry Brown advise them that there are "weaknesses in our democracy . . . which is only as perfect as are its people perfect."

Brown told the group the only way to keep peace in the world is to have a strong America—"and keep America so strong, working with and through the United Nations, that no nation would dare attack her."

The boys attended a press-radio dinner last night at the Willard Hotel, addressed by Albert Warner, Mutual Broadcasting System; Fred Othman, United Features; and Sir Willmott Lewis of The London Times.

The boys, meanwhile, elected their own heads of the defense establishment. They are: Secretary of Defense, Charles S. Brown, jr., 17, of War, W. Va.; Army Secretary Norman Cohn, 16, Waterloo, Iowa; Navy Secretary, Larry Ogle, 17, Miami, Fla.; and Air Force Secretary, George A. Sarinopoulos, 17, Fairfield, Ala.

On the agenda today is a forum "senate" convening in the caucus room of the Senate office building; lunch in the Senate restaurant; talks by Secretary of State Dean Acheson and Louis Bloomfield, United Nations State Department representative; and the election of a boy president.

The gathering will break up Thursday.

July Near-Record Month . . .

Washington's July Heat Wave 2d Worst in Bureau History

The past month was the second hottest July in the local Weather Bureau's records, which go back to 1872.

July's mean temperature, day and night, was 81.0 degrees, while the record high, chalked up by the Weather Bureau pioneers of July, 1872, was 81.1 degrees.

The average minimum daily temperature set a record for the month with 72.8 degrees, or just 1/10 of a degree higher than the similar figure for July, 1872, which must have been quite a month, too. The normal mean minimum is 67.3.

We had two nights—last Wednesday and Thursday—when the mercury did not go below 80 degrees, something which has happened only four time previously in 78 summers. The "highest minimum" on record was 81 degrees on July 27, 1930.

The six consecutive days of 95-degrees-or-over weather we "enjoyed" last month equaled the July record for this statistic, made in 1911, but August of 1900 provided seven such sizzling days in a stretch.

The all-month high was 96.2 on the 26th, 29th and 30th, mild figures compared to the all-time record here of 106 degrees on July 20, 1930.

The average maximum for the period was 89.1, as compared to the normal for July of 86.3.

We had five clear days, 16 partly cloudy days, and 10 cloudy days, out of which we received 218 hours and 54 minutes of sunshine, or 48 per cent of the possible sunshine.

There were 4.22 inches of rain recorded, compared to the normal of 4.71 inches. Average hourly wind velocity was 9.2 miles per hour.

Meter Coin Errors Figure In 2 of 102 D. C. Ticket 'Fixes'

Two women had their parking violation tickets changed to warnings last week after police heard that their offenses were cases of mistaken money.

Virginia Pole, 1845 Irving st. nw., told authorities that she used a coin which turned out to be defective thus jamming the meter. Ruth D. Pounder, of Alexandria, said she placed a coin which she thought was a nickel in the meter and it failed to register. Police said it didn't work because it was a penny, but excused her anyway.

They were among 102 motorists who had their tickets fixed last week.

Seven members of various diplomatic staffs also had tickets canceled last week because of diplomatic imunity. Listed were: Mario Luciolli, Italian Embassy, red meter; Mina A. Macri, Greek Embassy, no parking in emergency zone and parking more than six inches from the curb.

Ovidio M. Pozo, Bolivian Embassy, disobeying official signs; William E. Townsend, Australian Embassy, parked in "no parking from 4 to 6:30 p. m. zone;" Narajan C. Mukherice, Indian Embassy, for standing in a "no standing from 7 to 9:30 a. m. zone;" Jacques Parat, French Embassy, parking in a "no parking from 7 a. m. to 6 p. m. zone;" and Adriana P. Lagerwerff, the Netherlands Embassy, parked in a loading zone.

Rep. Gwinn Calls Federal Setup 'Burdensome'

Representative Ralph W. Gwinn (R., N. Y.) charged Saturday the present Federal Government is "as burdensome, as oppressive, and as tyrannical" as that the American colonists revolted against in 1776.

The New York Congressman spoke before a patriotic rally of the New York State Society, held at Woodlawn, the estate near Mount Vernon which George Washington gave his adopted daughter, Nellie Custis, as a wedding present.

"State socialism is already in partial possession of our Government and its machinery," he charged, and added he felt "we have violated" Washington's "every precept and faith in the future." He said he wondered if Washington ever dreamt the Government he help found would be as it is in 1949.

J. W. Rixey Smith, president of Woodlawn Public Foundation, Inc., and Harold B. Barnett, president of the New York State Society, were other speakers.

2 Silver Spring Skippers Reach N. Y. in Sailboat

New York, Aug. 1 (AP).—Two teen-agers from Silver Spring, Md., took a quick look at New York's skyscrapers today, and then made ready to continue their 1400-mile sailing trip to Michigan.

Thomas L. Eesley, 18, 239 Dale dr., and Lewis Chesley, 17, 10115 Pierce dr., planned to sail up the Hudson late today for Troy, then through the Erie Canal to Oswego and Lake Ontario.

They came here by way of Chesapeake and Delaware Bays, the Inland Waterway, and a stretch of the Atlantic Ocean begining at Sandy, Hook, N. J.

Compromise Sought On Education Bills

The House Education and Labor Committee will meet today in an attempt to compromise on aid-to-education bills in time for possible action at this session of Congress.

Chances of such action were admittedly poor.

Bill Hikes Limitation On 2 Planned Subs

The House yesterday passed and sent to the White House a bill raising the limitation from 30 million dollars to 41 million dollars for construction of two experimental submarines.

The House passed an identical bill last Thursday.

TRY IT COLLECT OLD CLOTHES FOR A COSTUME TRUNK

8-2

Do you have a trunk where you can gather all of the costumes which you use in producing shows? It is real fun to dig into a collection of old clothes, and create a clown outfit, a tramp get-up, or dress as a beautiful lady.

Mother will be pleased to help you locate an old trunk or a big solid box in which to collect your "dress-up" clothes. It can be painted and kept in your room or set in some spot convenient for dressing for your shows.

During each housecleaning time Mother can add castoff hats, dresses, and old shoes. Grandmother may be able to add some old-fashioned clothing that she and Granddad wore many years ago. Dad may have parts of his Army or Navy outfit to donate, a walking stick, or even an old tophat.

By adding your Halloween suits and cowboy and Indian play outfits, you will have all of the clothes necessary to produce a neighborhood show. Have Hollywood-like costumes right at home.

What's the Verdict?

WAY TO RUN RAILROAD

Q. The ABC company was a railroad corporation. Its charter specified that its business was limited to operation of a railroad. For convenience in handling some of its business, it acquired a ferry boat, and one day Doe was injured when the ferry boat captain mistakenly assumed he was a thug and hit him with an iron bar. Doe sues the railroad corporation, which denies liability on the theory that it had no right to run a boat. Is the defense good?

A. The railroad's defense carries legal hair-splitting to the absurd extent of saying that because it was doing an illegal act it was not responsible for harm caused by its wrongful act. True, a company chartered to operate a railroad is not supposed to run steamships, unless essential to operation of the railroad. But if it does go outside its authority, and operates a ship, it must be as careful in that matter as it must be in its lawful occupation. Judgment for Doe, plaintiff.—F. L. D.

Cases discussed illustrate general principles. They should not be construed as legal advice to particular cases. Take your legal problems to your lawyer.

But You Were Gone

There is so much I wish that I . . . Had had a chance to say . . . Before your heart decided and . . . Before you went away . . . I wanted to remind you of . . . The days we used to know . . . When summer smiled in sunshine and . . . The winter walked in snow . . . When spring bestowed its flowers on . . . The joy of every dance . . . And autumn lingered in the leaves . . . Of beautiful romance . . . But you were gone before the stars . . . Had faded from the sky . . . Before I could explain to you . . . Or kiss your lips goood-by . . . And now I fear it is too late . . . To find another dawn . . . Our magic moon has disappeared . . . And what is past is gone.

BARNABY

Barnaby, I'm sorry I spoke so harshly to you downstairs. I'm afraid I was upset—
Oh, that's okay, Pop.
Look how nice Gus the Ghost made up the bed. You'd never believe he was sleeping here, would you?
I give up!
His mind is in a dream world miles away—I tried to be nice to him and all he did was talk some more about that ghost. . .

No Sales Tax on Autos, But You'll Shell Out That 2% Anyhow

Probably the most frequently asked question to accompany a new sales tax law is: "If I sell my old camera (or baby buggy, or radio, or car, etc.) do I have to charge the buyer sales tax?

This type of sale, from one private party to another, is called an "incidental sale," and is tax exempt.

However there's a joker in the case of auto sales. All autos are tax exempt, even when you buy from a dealer. But there's a 2 per cent excise tax which must be paid by the person who applies for registration—regardless of where the car was bought, or from whom.

So the way to beat the auto tax is: Use Capital Transit, hail a cab—or walk.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Kittens abandoned on my back steps; they seem to be about a month old." (Georgia 6317.)

"Very nice male cat, very affectionate, begs for attention." (Georgia 2899.)

"Beautiful pearl-gray fluffy kitten; housebroken." (Overlook 3831.)

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

Blanche Berlin of 812 Randolph st. nw. says that my comments about buying a house remind her of the ad which said:

"Only $24,500—Hurry—This One Won't Last Long."

TWO WAY STREET

This column recorded a complaint from a reader who charged that some policemen in No. 8 Precinct had been discourteous.

Capt. John E. Fondahl of No. 8 supplies some additional data. He says that two separate investigations (precinct and headquarters) failed to reveal any basis for disciplinary action.

"One policeman made one remark which might have been construed as discourteous," says Captain Fondahl. "When the citizen in question admitted having had a 'couple' of beers, the officer remarked that he looked like he'd had a couple of gallons. That was uncalled for, and perhaps a bit discourteous.

"But there is no evidence to substantiate the remainder of the complaint. And as a matter of fact, there is some doubt as to the validity of the charges, because of confusion in identifying the men allegedly involved. A policeman previously identified as 'the chief offender' was later identified as 'the one who didn't take much part in the conversation.'

"We therefore informed the complainants that we saw no basis for action, but that if they cared to file written charges, the complaint would be presented to the Trial Board. To date, no charges have been placed."

Incidentally, it might be well for all of us to remember that Major Barrett's plea for courtesy is not a one-way street.

Policemen (like shoemakers, reporters and Indian chiefs) are human. Ordinarily, they'll give you decent treatment if you'll meet them half way.

When you and I get grouchy with each other, nothing much happens except that our friendship gets strained. But when a policeman wakes up on the wrong side of the bed, he's liable to find his career at stake.

So if we want courtesy from them, let's be realistic—and practice it ourselves.

COINCIDENCE DEPT.

Remember that item I had about the patient at the Washington Home for Incurables whose radio was stolen?

The story ran Saturday morning. By noon, I had received four telephone calls—from Harold A. Sugar's Radio Mart, 625 F st. nw.; from the Ross Jewelry Co., 1331 F st. nw.; from Phillips Radio & Television, 817 H st. ne.; and from J. H. Forsyth, jr., who isn't even in the radio business. He runs a drug store at 8209 Georgia ave., Silver Spring, Md.

All four callers had the same message: "I want to help the fellow whose radio was stolen—and don't use my name." (Okay, District Liners—don't read the four names mentioned above: these guys are bashful.)

Then I called Ina F. Viner, superintendent of the Home for Incurables. I said:

"Only one radio was requested, but four have been offered. What shall I do? The donors are all anxious to help, and I don't want to disappoint them."

"That's easy," said Miss Viner. "You heard about only one case, but actually four radios were stolen. They were taken by two former employes, who have been apprehended by the police. But the radios were not recovered—so we really need four."

A perfect solution. If each of the four gentlemen whose names were not mentioned above will communicate with Miss Viner (Woodley 3720) you'll make her and her patients very happy.

PERSONAL NOTES

Ed Wranek, 615 A st. se.: I am delighted to inform you that your excellent poem about our insufferable weather is no longer timely; the poem arrived just as the storm clouds were breaking the heat wave. I could have accomplished the same end by washing my car—but I'll let you have the credit .

The Lyon's Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK—During Eric Johnston's trip to Europe, one of his aides conferred with Yugoslavia's Minister of Films at the same time Johnston met with Marshal Tito. The Minister of Films said that under no circumstances would Yugoslavia buy American movies . . . Tito, in a long, amicable session with Johnston, discussed his country's need of oil-drilling equipment. Johnston assured him it was out of his province—he was interested only in selling American movies. But Tito kept remembering Johnston's previous position as head of the United States Chamber of Commerce—and repeated his need for oil-drilling equipment. He stepped into another office to make a phone call. At the same time the Minister of Films received a phone call and then told Johnston's aide that Yugoslavia would buy American movies, and the deal was set . . . When Johnston came home he mentioned Tito's need to an oil executive. Tito will get the drills he needs.

Charles Boyer, who has been in Europe for several months, came home recently. As soon as he cleared through customs and sent his luggage to his hotel, Boyer took a long walk up Fifth ave. "One thing I've noticed about New York," said the star, "two hours after you're back here, somehow you forget you've ever been away."

In Eleanor Roosevelt's forthcoming book she'll reveal some sidelights on the late Harry Hopkins which will not please his friends . . . Harpo Marx, who returned last week from London, where he attended the premiere of "Love Happy," says he participated in the movie debut of G. B. Shaw—an event which still is one of Shaw's secrets. When they were in Nice they both appeared as extras in a poolroom scene in a French movie being made there—a movie called "Three Passions" . . . Shirley Mae France will start swimming the English Channel carrying a water-proof wristwatch, a ball-point pen and other items for which she'll sign indorsements. She'll dump these items, of course, as soon as she's off-shore.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Mundt Business Aid Plan Hailed

By Drew Pearson

Those who have long watched the Washington run-around feel that South Dakota's Senator Karl Mundt has come up with the best proposal yet to avoid inside lobbying and help the little business man. Mundt, who knows his Washington well, proposed to establish a Government information bureau to give businessmen all data regarding Government contracts.

Mundt

If properly organized, this could be a great boon to all business. The average firm cannot afford to employ a special representative to sit in Washington, therefore loses out to big firms that do.

General Motors long has operated one of the most efficient offices in Washington, entertains Army-Navy officers, knows pretty much what the Government is buying. Studebaker, Douglas Aircraft, Pan American Airways, TWA, and many other big firms have done the same. Furthermore, they deduct their costs from income taxes, so Uncle Sam foots much of the bill.

That's why the average business firm is left out in the cold, partly why only six American firms got 60 per cent of the Government's war contracts.

Senator Mundt, realizing this, has proposed an information bureau which could usher in a new era for little business.

Turning Points

Small incidents in the lives of men sometimes become turning points in history. One incident that turned the life of Senator J. Howard McGrath, newly designated Attorney General, was a torchlight parade in Rhode Island 20 years ago.

The parade was staged by Harry Storin of Keith's theater in honor of actor Eddie Dowling, a native son who was returning to Rhode Island to play "Honeymoon Lane." Young McGrath, a budding politician, was in the parade, got to know Dowling.

Later, when Roosevelt entered the White House, he bitterly disliked Rhode Island's Senator Peter Gerry, handed the State's patronage over to his old friend, Eddie Dowling. Dowling, unfamiliar with politics, passed it on to Howard McGrath.

That gave McGrath his big political start. He ran for State attorney general, then for Governor, and while serving as Governor was offered the post of Solicitor General in the Justice Department. Truman had first offered this office—which presents Government cases to the Supreme Court—to Governor Ellis Arnall of Georgia. Arnall turned it down.

At that time, Truman's chances of being reelected were considered nil. However, Governor McGrath accepted the job on the second bounce, even left the Governorship to take it. From there, he went on to the Senate, now to the Cabinet. If he had declined the Solicitor Generalship, he would never be where he is today.

Merry-Go-Round

Bob Reynolds, noisy isolationist former Senator from North Carolina, is talking about running for the Senate against quiet, dignified Clyde Hoey. He wouldn't have a chance . . . Senator Bert Miller, Idaho Democrat, has hired a Republican to run his office—his brother, John Miller . . . Senators have a secret agreement with the official reporters to cut down on dull, windy speeches. A copy of the speech is sent to the reporters in advance, then the Senator quietly skips several inside pages in reading the speech. But the reporters, who have the full text, dutifully record the whole thing. . . . Congressional leaders have informed the President there is no hope for enactment of the social security extension bill this session. The House will pass legislation calling for extension of social security benefits to about 10 million additional employes, plus increased old-age assistance and retirement benefits, but the Senate won't have time to consider it . . . Some House members already are jumping the adjournment gun and stealing back to their districts . . . The House will begin three-day recesses (virtual adjournment) about the third week in August . . . House leaders are sticking to their private agreement to postpone action on the controversial aid-to-education bill until next winter, when they hope Catholic opposition will have cooled down . . . The Barden bill is hopelessly stymied in the House Labor Committee and leaders doubt they have the votes to dislodge compromise legislation already passed by the Senate.
